Derby Flood Hits.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Louisville, Ky., May 7.—Another flood has hit Louisville. It's a far cry from those soul-tearing radio pleas of "woman and child hanging on window sill at—send a boat—boat—doctor needed at——" to the "They're off—the favorite is in front—they're going into the first turn." That's the difference a few months can make here in the Blue Grass country.

Last February, a Nation twisted handkerchiefs in sympathy as the "Beautiful Ohio" took its toll and rallied to swell the Red Cross Fund. Tomorrow, a Nation will bite fingernails in keen anticipation and rally to swell the backing of its favorites. Up to its second stories in water and later up to its doorsteps in slime, Louisville now is up to its neck in celebrities and promises to be up to its knees in gold.

Truly, bunting has replaced sandbags—and the sun shines bright on "My Old Kentucky Home."

"Who Do You Like?"

It probably is May 7, 1937, elsewhere in these United States, but it's Derby Eve here—and there's no mistake about it. Tomorrow, the sixty-third Kentucky Derby will be run here at Churchill Downs. I was reminded of it while I waited for the porter to bring my other shirt and my typewriter. I hummed the current hit, "Let's Call the Whole Thing Off." Expressions on several nearby faces shifted from mint julep to poison ivy, and I tactfully changed my tune to "When My Dream Boat Comes Home."

It was "how high is the river, Colonel." Now it's "who do you like, Colonel?"

That question had 103 answers when the nominations for this Kentucky classic were released. This morning there were only 20 possible answers, the number of entries posted. It was only fitting Col. Edward R. Bradley should be first to have a horse officially in the Derby. The only man who has owned four Derby winners decided to depend on a lone entry, Billionaire, and the slip was first to be dropped into the box. Then the rush was on. Trainer-and-Owner Mary Hirsch's No Sir was last to get in line and it is from the middle group that the experts say will come the winner of the Derby.

War Admiral Is Choice.

The official entries did not change the favorite. The Glen Riddle Farm's diminutive War Admiral continued to hold the most interest, as he has since he rocketed into favor with the recent poor showing of J. H. Loucheim's Pompoon. The son of Man o' War is the one colt in the field that has "done everything asked" this spring. Most price makers held War Admiral at 9-5.

Two important things have served to encourage the backers of War Admiral. First, the weather prediction for tomorrow is fair and warm. There was some question of the colt's ability in the mud. Second, War Admiral drew No. 1 post position. Ordinarily this would have been a handicap but it was announced today that the Derby would be started from a point 20 feet from the quarter pole instead of 60 beyond the pole as has been the case in previous years.

The new position of the starting stalls, placing them off the turn, is expected to do away with the bumping that has been caused in recent Derbys due to the inside horses trying to get into the straightaway. The curve of the track was a factor in Granville's losing his rider at the break last year.

Second choice in the field of 17 colts and 3 geldings is expected to be the Milky Way Stable's entry of Reaping Reward and Military. These colts, owned by Mrs. Ethel

Girl, 16, After 5 Years Married Life, Divorced

Tavares, Fla., May 7 (AP).—Dolly Mae Russek, 16, won a divorce in Circuit Court from her 59-year-old husband, Edmunds Russek, whom she married five years ago.

In a final hearing, the young woman testified: "On one occasion when we were living in Gainesville, he got mad with me and whipped me with a switch. At another time he took a shingle and whipped me with it. He hit me with his fist and cursed me because I did not feel like working."

Russek denied the charges.

Apple Queen Ascends Throne Before 20,000 at Winchester

By Scott Hart.
A Staff Correspondent.

Winchester, Va., May 7.—In a ceremony that seemed a bit of old England, Virginians of the upper valley today crowned Gretchen Bigelow Thomson, of New Orleans, a girl with blonde hair, blue eyes, but no Southern accent, as Queen Shenandoah XIV, while 20,000 Apple Blossom Festival celebrants looked on from a gentle slope before the golden throne.

No queen of chivalry's time ever took a crown in a setting more lovely. The blue eyes of the newest apple country queen could look for 20 miles to an encircling wall of the Blue Ridge Mountains. Hazy and far away the rich apple lands, checkered with trees, could be drawn in by the eye, and in the immediate foreground the Handley Stadium was green and the queen's subjects were smiling and packed densely beyond the 40-yard line.

The sun shone on the long white steps that led to the Handley School porch. Gray uniformed cadets of Massanutten Military Academy stood stiffly on the steps. The queen walked down with her maids of honor, Mary Scully and Eleanor Griffith, and her train bearers, Adelaide Coble and Barbara Pond, and sat on the golden throne that had high golden arms. The princesses of the court appeared in Elizabethan gowns and the crown bearer, Anne Roy Cather, took position.

Said the minister of the crown: "Hearken, all ye people of the coun-

Rebel Planes, Big Guns Blast Helpless Towns

Bilbao, Nearby Centers Unable to Resist Bombardment.

By the Associated Press.

Bilbao, Spain, May 7.—A squadron of 14 insurgent planes dumped tons of bombs on Basque villages and government troop concentrations around Bilbao today, killing an undetermined number of women and children.

The planes rained death from the skies as Insurgent Gen. Emilia Mola's heavy artillery shelled Basque soldiers at Mount Sollube, key point in the Basque defensive system east of Bilbao.

The Basques, without planes to resist the attack, doggedly held to their trenches amid scores of exploding bombs and shells. Insurgent planes kept up a merciless machine-gun fire, but the insurgents met fierce resistance as they advanced after each air attack.

Aerial and artillery bombardment marked the third day of an insurgent drive to rout Basques from the Bermeo sector, where 2,000 insurgents, including many Italians, have been surrounded by government soldiers.

The village of Zamudio, strategic point in the Basque cordon of steel about Bilbao, was the target for a heavy bombardment by insurgent fliers. No estimate was given of the number killed there. Many had

Mrs. Simpson Takes Edward Wine-Tasting

By the Associated Press.

Monts, France, May 7.—Wallis Warfield Simpson guided the Duke of Windsor on a gay wine-tasting excursion in the famous Vouvray wine district today.

Deserting the Chateau de Cande together for the first time since their reunion, the couple explored the wine cellars of several castles on a short trip through the countryside.

They lunched on chicken, lobster a la Bretagne and old Vouvray wine at a little old inn in the village of Semblancay. The proprietor said Mrs. Simpson had promised three weeks ago to bring her "sweetheart" as soon as he arrived in France.

Wedding plans of the famous couple moved a step further as Mrs. Simpson arranged for a duplicate of her birth certificate required before she can be married in France.

She went with the duke to Vendome, where they met George Tait, United States consul, from Paris. Mrs. Simpson signed an affidavit, her original birth certificate had been lost or mislaid.

The duke plans a sightseeing trip tomorrow, but he will be alone. Mrs.

Co-ordination Of D.C. Police To Be Sought

Crime Body to Make Study of Complex System.

Work of 6 Forces Often Conflicts, Decreasing Efficiency.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A movement soon will be started to co-ordinate enforcement activities of Washington's numerous police agencies, it was learned last night.

The Washington Criminal Justice Association, in its recent report, stressed the need for closer cooperation and pointed to the existence of "confusion" as a result of overlapping jurisdictions.

Law enforcement in the District is divided into four separate major units, each with an administrative head. In addition, there are two minor police forces operating with the power of arrest.

"With six such police forces totaling approximately 1,800 employes, under the direction of six different officials," said Dr. James Allen Nolan, director of the criminal justice group, "it would appear that much confusion in questions of jurisdiction and function is likely to exist. The association plans, during the coming year, to study this situation."

Merger Sought Before.

Repeated proposals have been made during recent years to merge the Metropolitan and Park police departments.

During recent budget hearings on Capitol Hill, Representative Ross Collins, chairman of the House subcommittee on District appropriations, suggested the two divisions be merged in an effort to bring increased efficiency in crime and traffic control.

His proposal was tabled for future reference.

Arno B. Cammerer, director of National Capital Parks, said he was "utterly opposed" to the merger.

"We have entirely separate and distinctive duties from those of the regular Metropolitan Police," Cammerer declared. "We do not essentially chase criminals, although we do a lot of criminal work. If you should place the Park Police under the Metropolitan Police, you should do the same with the Traffic Police, Capitol Police and Soldiers' Home force."

Investigation Denied.

Reports yesterday of a scheduled Congressional investigation of local crime conditions, with particular reference to the Metropolitan Police Department, were denied by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), Maryland, chairman of a subcommittee now hearing tax questions.

"No such inquiry is planned," said Kennedy. "We are going to study the efficiency of all District departments, but no emphasis will be placed on crime."

And at the same time yesterday, it was reported 148 women prisoners are crowded into antiquated quarters at the District Jail.

Several are awaiting trial, while others have been convicted of minor offenses. To house this large number of women prisoners, jail officials said, double-deck beds and temporary cots have been moved into the female wing.

Overcrowded conditions at the Occoquan Workhouse, it was said, will not permit transfer of women inmates.

With hardly enough space to move about, jail attaches declared, the women are forced to eat, sleep and exercise under "deplorable" conditions. No attempt can be made to segregate the prisoners according to offenses.

Plan Is Approved For Four Blimps

Army Will Discontinue Balloons Because of Restrictions.

By William V. Nessly.

International interest centered last night on the tragic mass of wreckage that 24 hours before had been the giant airliner Hindenburg.

Shocked officials of this Government hurriedly opened three separate investigations into the disaster, and Germany sent its own investigators rushing to the scene, headed by Dr. Hugo Eckener, veteran designer of Zeppelins.

Throughout the daze that followed the holocaust, however, sentiment here and elsewhere for lighter-than-air craft appeared to have stood up well under the terrific blow of the destruction of the Hindenburg.

New Blimps Authorized.

Even before the ruins had fully cooled, the Navy Department took the first formal steps toward obtaining four new blimps authorized in its 1938 appropriation bill.

At the same time, Dr. William F. Durand, head of a National Academy of Sciences committee to investigate airship construction and usefulness, predicted that after his committee reports in the near future the Navy will recommend a new lighter-than-air construction program.

Along the same line, Senator Royal S. Copeland planned a study intended to "assure the public that this type of airship can be made safe."

Secretary of Commerce Roper said he was "just as much interested in lighter-than-air craft as before," and wondered "whether the accident would have happened if the Hindenburg had used noninflammable helium instead of hydrogen."

Secretary of the Navy Swanson said "the Navy will continue the possible utility of lighter-than-air ships for naval purposes."

Sabotage Considered.

Sabotage hints arose soon after the crash but were soon cast aside.

"A very, very puzzling situation," was the characterization given the crash by Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson, who took charge of the wreckage for the time being.

He said he had heard no reports that the explosion of the ship might have been caused by sabotage and said it would be unfair for anyone even to guess at the cause of the wreck at this time.

Meanwhile, Capital officials grimly set about learning, if possible, what had caused the terrible explosion and fire, and means of avoiding a repetition.

Inquiries were ordered by the Commerce Department, the Copeland Air Safety Committee, and the Bureau of Mines. The Navy Department announced it would cooperate with the Commerce Department and "will take no further action" pending a written report by Commander C. E. Rosendahl, in command at the Lakehurst station where the explosion and fire occurred. Commander Rosendahl also will head the technical advisers at the Commerce Department inquiry.

Secretary of Commerce Roper announced appointment of South Trimble, jr., solicitor of the department; Maj. R. W. Schroeder, assistant director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, and Denis Mulligan, chief of regulations and enforcement division of the Air Commerce Bureau, as his investigation board. A representative of the German Ambassador also was invited to act as observer.

Open hearings will be started by the board on Monday morning at Lakehurst.

Technical advisers of the board, in addition to Rosendahl, will be

Senate Group Moves to Make Helium Available to World

Approval of Bill Loosening Restrictions on Sale, Export of Gas Follows Announcement Hindenburg Disaster Was Caused by Hydrogen.

By Robert C. Albright.

A Senate committee moved yesterday to lighten restrictions on export and sale of helium, as the Hindenburg crash centered world-wide attention on America's monopoly of the nonexplosive gas.

Action by the Senate Military Affairs Committee to trim protective red tape followed general agreement of experts that the Lakehurst disaster would not have occurred had helium instead of hydrogen been used in the giant dirigible.

Although the President now has authority, with assent of his Secretaries of War, Navy and Interior, to permit private exports of helium, the bill reported by the Senate committee yesterday would permit freer sales and shipments in this country and abroad.

Helium Could Be Sold.

For the first time, the Government could sell, instead of lease, from its helium resources to Americans. The American purchasers, in turn, could export the gas in limited quantities, so long as they were not "of military importance."

Commented Chairman Royal S. Copeland, of the Senate Commerce Committee:

"I favor contributing to the world whatever helium we can spare. It is just ordinary international humanitarianism."

Due to its greater lifting power, and their own lack of a helium supply, the Germans had been using highly inflammable hydrogen in the Hindenburg, originally designed for helium use.

Eckener Assured Helium.

Navy Department officials said the Germans had not asked permission to use American helium in the dirigible. But Dr. Hugo Eckener, noted German Zeppelin authority, is said to have been assured last summer all the helium he might need for commercial operations.

As the hope of lighter-than-air safety of the future pivoted on America's helium supply, Roscoe A. Cattell, chief engineer of the natural gas division of the Bureau of Mines, outlined to reporters the romance of the gas, and the Government's virtual control of the industry.

Center of the Government monopoly is the Bureau of Mines plant at Amarillo, Tex., drawing on 50,000 acres of natural gas, and capable of producing up to 24,000,000 cubic feet of helium a year. Here the rare element averages the

Berlin Orders Inquiry Into Air Disaster

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 7.—Undaunted by the loss of the Hindenburg, the German government moved tonight to place another giant airship in service between Europe and North America as soon as possible, probably within three months.

After a conference with the veteran dirigible commander, Dr. Hugo Eckener, the Reich's air minister, Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, ordered the airship builders at Friedrichshafen to rush to completion the LZ-130, which was to have been the sister ship of the Hindenburg.

Officials of the air ministry estimated Gen. Goering's order meant completion of the new dirigible soon enough to permit her to take the Hindenburg's place in the transatlantic airlanes within three months.

In a proclamation addressed to the men of the German air service, Gen. Goering announced his decision to speed up completion of the LZ-130 and added:

"Working shoulder to shoulder, we men of the German air service want to show the world that in spite of everything the idea and the enterprising spirit of Count Zeppelin persists, that airship communication between nations is a work of peace, binding peoples closer together and simply cannot be eliminated at this stage of world development."

'I Can't Understand It,' Veteran Mutters on Deathbed.

Pruss' Condition Still Is Critical

Rosendahl Broadcasts Report of Disaster to Germany.

By the Associated Press.

Lakehurst, N. J., May 7.—Capt. Ernst Lehmann, stocky veteran master of Zeppelins, joined 32 other victims of the Hindenburg disaster in death tonight, as Federal authorities set out to establish the cause of the fatal plunge of the great dirigible.

Before he died, Lehmann, who skippered the Hindenburg on her pioneering passenger trips here a year ago, echoed the views of the parade of aeronautical experts who have looked over the grotesque wreckage strewn over the U. S. Naval air station landing field.

"I can't understand it," he said. "I can't understand it."

Meanwhile, the latest death toll of last night's flaming disaster released by the Zeppelin company placed the known victims at 33. The roll named 11 passengers, 21 members of the crew, and 1 spectator as dead.

Burns Fatal to Lehmann.

Capt. Lehmann, who flew Zeppelin raiders in the World War and was master of the Hindenburg on its ten transatlantic voyages last year, died of burns and injuries at 4:55 p. m., more than 22 hours after he stumbled dazed from the flame-ridden airship. His protege, Capt. Max Pruss, who took over command for that fatal first voyage here this year, was still in critical condition from burns.

Lehmann died in Paul Kimball Hospital as physicians debated whether it would be safe to remove him to the Harkness Pavilion of the New York Medical Center.

The other three high-ranking officers, Capt. Pruss, Capt. Albert Sammt, first officer, and William Speck, chief radio officer, were carried to the ambulances and started for New York with a motorcycle police escort.

"It could have been a lot worse; we could have all been killed," Capt. Sammt muttered in German through lips swollen by fire to twice their natural size.

"Thank you," he whispered as an attendant moved an arm he indicated was in a painful position.

Speck, in a coma and suffering great pain, was the second carried out. He mumbled in German as the stretcher was placed in the private ambulance.

Prayers Said Over Body.

The last was Pruss who shook hands with a nurse, Miss Florence Crocker, and thanked her. He said he was "very thirsty" and was given a drink of water.

The Rev. Carl H. Miller, of Asbury Park, and the Rev. Dr. Gustavus H. Bechtold, of Philadelphia, recited Lutheran prayers over Capt. Lehmann's body.

Bechtold said Lehmann was "very cheerful" this noon when he talked with German Ambassador Hans Luther, but lost strength rapidly and "had no pulse" at 2 p. m.

About an hour before Lehmann's death, his friend, Comdr. Charles E. Rosendahl, hero of American airship flights and commandant at Lakehurst Naval Base where the dirigible's skeleton lay, broadcast a report of the disaster to the German nation.

"In judging this disaster," he said, "it must be remembered that the Hindenburg was lost through fire. The ship had successfully completed her westbound crossing over the North Atlantic, was under normal control in every respect and was making a normal landing.

"Whatever may have been the origin," he continued, "the loss of the Hindenburg can be attributed only to one basic cause, namely, that of fire. Had this ship been inflated with the noninflammable, nonexplosive helium gas, such as is used in our American airships, such a catastrophe would have been impossible."

As State, county and Government boards assembled around the tragic heap of wreckage it was agreed on all sides that the use of hydrogen

Roosevelt Grants Jordan 30-Day Reprieve; Convicted Murderer Feels 'Flatiron' Lifted

Taking time out in his quest for game fish off Texas, President Roosevelt yesterday granted Thomas Jordan, scheduled to die in the District's electric chair next Friday, 30 more days of life.

The 30-day respite was announced here by the Department of Justice, which had asked for more time to investigate Jordan's alleged crime—the fatal shooting on Good Friday of 1931 of Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes, aged cashier at the Garden T-Shoppe, Columbia road near Eighteenth street northwest.

Wardif the postponement reached Jordan shortly after the dinner hour at the District Jail, and it had the effect of lightening the flatiron on his head.

This is the way Jordan, a 36-year-old short order cook, describes the feeling that has oppressed him during the 13 months he has been under the shadow of the electric chair.

"It's been kind of a pressing-down feeling on the top of my head," he explained to a Post reporter at the jail last night. "It's as if I had a heavy book or a flatiron on my head. It always comes when I start thinking about my trial and what a d—— fool I've been."

He was referring to the circumstances of his arrest in May, 1935.

THOMAS JORDAN.

Long before this he had been questioned about the murder and released. In Mount Vernon, N. Y., he fell in love with a girl, told her about the case, and then, so that there would be no "cloud" over their marriage, wrote a letter to United States Attorney Leslie Garnett to ask if his name had been cleared. His arrest, trial, conviction and death sentence followed that romantic gesture.

A little fellow with a black toothbrush mustache, Jordan told how it feels to be a week away from the lethal lightning of the electric chair.

"Has it haunted me? No. I think that haunting stuff is a lot of hooey. I guess I am fatalistic about it. If it has to be, it has to be, and that's all there is to it. As long as I am satisfied that I am not guilty, it doesn't make much difference.

"I'd hate to die, but I am not going to cry if I have to.

"I think if you have made your peace with God, it has a lot to do with the way you feel. I have made mine, and I am not worrying.

"What does worry me, and brings that flatiron on my head, is thinking about the d——lies I have told that got me in this mess."

Jordan claims he confessed to killing Mrs. Jaynes during a holdup with two confederates—an unidentified gunman and a missing girl—to keep the name of his fiancee in New York out of the case.

His decision to become a convert to the Catholic Church, he said,

Man Wanted Here Since '35 Arrested By F. B. I. Agents

A country-wide search, begun in the fall of 1935 for 33-year-old Jewell Ashby Gould, ended late yesterday with his arrest in New York City by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents. Gould is wanted in Washington for bringing here, from New York, more than $5,000 in stolen jewelry.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the bureau, said Gould was caught while awaiting delivery of an expensive automobile.

On October 24, 1935, Metropolitan Police Department detectives arrested Eula Mae Bennett and David Pinas. In their possession had been found jewelry valued at $30,000.

The following day, both were released and efforts were made to determine whether the jewelry had been stolen. Upon discovering some of it was, indictments were returned against Miss Bennett, Pinas and Gould.

On November 30, 1935, the girl was released under bond and the two men became fugitives from justice.

Kidnap-Holdup of New Yorker Charged to 3 D. C. Young Men

Three Washington young men this morning will be charged with kidnaping a former district attorney of New York County, police said last night after they had identified the victim of a robbing and beating Wednesday night.

The man, Karl R. Miner, 56, of Yonkers, was reported to have been forced into a stolen truck late Wednesday night, and driven to Brook Lane, Md., where the boys robbed him of $30, beat him, and deserted him.

According to police, the trio, Henry J. McRea, 22, of 906 G street southwest; Joseph Crampton, 23, of 1240 Thirty-sixth street northwest, and John C. White, 24, of 1018 F street northwest, stole a meat truck. After selling the meat, they seized Miner and robbed him. They were arrested, along with two girls who will not be charged with kidnaping by Private S. T. Creech, the Seventh Precinct, early Thursday.

Detective Hodgkinson, assigned to the case, became suspicious when a telephone call from Georgetown said a man had been forced into a truck in the 3200 block of M street northwest. Hodgkinson searched the truck, found a hat with the initials "K. R. M." Confronted with the evidence, the boys are said to have confessed, but could not identify their victim.

The detective searched hospitals and hotels, and finally located a man whose initials were the same as those in the hat, who had left Washington Friday, giving a New York forwarding address.

Last night Miner talked with police over the telephone, said he had been kidnaped and robbed, and would press charges against the three.

Basic Standard For U. S. Labor Is New Goal

Administration to Seek Minimum Conditions, Miss Perkins Says.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Perkins said yesterday that legislation to establish "minimum working conditions" for labor is point No. 1 in the Roosevelt Administration's labor program.

The statement was made to Senator Pope (Democrat), Idaho, in a radio discussion recorded for broadcast from Idaho stations Monday evening.

Relying to Pope's assertion that the Administration "is developing a fine program" in the interest of wage earners, the Labor Secretary said:

"I agree with you, Senator, and think the following points will cover it:

"1. The protection of the great mass of workers by legislation on minimum working conditions.

"2. Protection and promotion by legal enactment and machinery of the right to organize and bargain collectively * * *.

"3. Utilization of effective techniques of conciliation and mediation to ease the strain of collective bargaining * * *.

"4. Provision for workers and employers alike of economic and financial information relating to industries where collective bargaining is under way."

While Miss Perkins spoke, Congressional committees were preparing for hearings next week on proposed wage, hour and child-labor legislation. So far the Administration has made no official pronouncement of its views on the legislation in question.

The House Labor Committee will consider the Ellenbogen bill to establish a "little NRA" for the textile industry. The Senate Labor committee intends to call witnesses on the bill by Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, prohibiting interstate shipment of goods produced in factories employing children under 16, or, in certain industries, 18.

Miss Perkins indicated that Administration policy might embrace continuing expenditures on "unemployables" after other forms of relief tapered off.

"There ought to be a permanent activity in the United States," she said, "for the rehabilitation of the victims of the depression and of old-age poverty. Let us not call it relief any more—let's call it rehabilitation and reconstruction."

She said that in finding the Wagner labor act constitutional the Supreme Court had "done away with the principal cause" of industrial unrest, and agreed with Pope that it would decrease the number of strikes.

Of the 1,015 recent strikes, 524 were for union organization, she explained.

Farm Income Higher For 3-Month Period

By the Associated Press.

Government economists reported yesterday cash income of farmers the first three months of this year was larger than in the corresponding period of 1936.

Cash from sales of farm products lagged behind last year in some States, the Bureau of Agriculture Economics said, but Government benefit payments more than offset this.

Cash farm income for all regions was estimated at $1,945,000,000, compared with $1,520,000,000 in the same period last year.

Representative Taylor Is Taken to Hospital

The Colorado Democrat has been elected to the House for 15 successive terms, 1909 to 1939.

Politics and People

Americans' Hearts Go Out to Germans in Hour of Disaster, Despite Distaste for Fascism.

By Franklyn Waltman

AN hour of distress and cruel disaster makes all humanity, irrespective of race and creed, akin. Thus today our hearts go out in genuine sympathy to the German people, not alone for those sons lost in the Hindenburg explosion, but also because the first courageous effort of an intrepid people commercially to span the Atlantic by air has come to a tragic and heart-breaking end.

WALTMAN.

We forget for the day, at least, the distasteful strutting of Fuehrer Hitler and his Nazi cohorts. We forget their brutalities and inhumanity to an innocent race within their borders and to geniuses of their own who dare to oppose them. We forget the menace that Germany is to world peace. In brief, we forget or ignore all the obnoxiousness of Fascism.

Instead we grieve with the people of Frankfort-on-Main for their lost ones, just as we grieve over our own dead and injured. We admire the courage of Dr. Hugo Eckener in his determination not to abandon his effort to span the world by air. We are pleased with President Roosevelt's message of condolence to Hitler on our behalf.

In this hour of mourning our thoughts turn to the Germany which years ago added so much to the advancement of learning; to its artists and scientists; and to delightful hours of beer-drinking with its convivial and delightful citizens.

Out of this change in our feelings, which appear to be reflected by the entire Nation, European rulers and diplomats should learn a lesson. It is that we hold the best of good will to people throughout the world, but that the national conscience of this country remains keenly alive to the ideals of democracy and humanitarianism. If they cherish our friendship and good will, it cannot be attained by a reversion to practices of the Dark Ages.

Senator William E. Borah, a few hours before the Hindenburg disaster, arose in the Senate to express the fear that belief in, or sympathy with, fascism was growing in this country. Senator Borah's speech was itself evidence that his fear was ill-founded, for the Lion of Idaho, whatever his shortcomings may be, is an unusually accurate sounding-board of public opinion in this country. He has the facility of giving expression, in extraordinary measure, to the sentiments of the average man in this country.

The indignation and resentment expressed by Senator Borah over the atrocities of fascism in Ethiopia and at Guernica appear to represent sentiments widely held in the United States. Instead of fascism becoming increasingly popular here, it is becoming the object of mounting hostility as its actions become better known. Thus, although we have no direct concern with the Spanish warfare, the American people rapidly are becoming partisans of the loyalist cause in that unhappy country.

Is this solely because the heart of America goes out to the underdog? Sympathy for the oppressed and mistreated and those in distress is an American trait, and undoubtedly contributes to the emotional waves of likes and dislikes which swell over this country. But it is more than that. America remains steadfastly devoted to democratic principles and ideology.

* * *

Aside from all the other factors present at the time—denial of America's right to freedom of the seas; war trade and the financial stake this country finally developed in the Allied cause—the real reason why this country entered the World War was the threat of German militarists to democracy. From the beginning our sympathies were on the side of those two sister-democracies, France and England—and it was inevitable that, should their backs be pressed to the wall, we would come to their aid. The other factors resulted from this dominating sentiment of the American people.

Despite all the neutrality legislation which can be devised—despite all official efforts at isolation and burying our heads in the sands—so will it be again should Europe be enveloped by war. Instinctively and by heritage, the United States by spirit is committed to the cause of democracy throughout the world and it is realistic to realize that this type of spirit eventually leads to action when the necessity arises.

Were concrete evidence needed of the fact that this country still possesses a lively sympathy toward those subjected to oppression, it is provided by the Spanish conflict. For three years this country has heard the cry that in any future war we must be neutral at all costs—that we should mind our own business and let Europe settle its difficulties as it would—that we should maintain neutrality in thought and word as well as in action.

What has been the effect of this campaign? Well, it can fairly well be demonstrated that the American people have taken sides in the Spanish conflict—and generally they are on the side of the loyalist forces. The presence of Italian and German troops on the rebel side would be sufficient reason for the development of this sentiment. Incidents such as happened at Guernica only make more intense and widespread a sentiment already existing.

It is true that our government is maintaining a rigid neutrality toward the Spanish conflict and that it is highly improbable that the loyalists can count on any help from this country. But then the Spanish struggle is not of sufficient importance or magnitude to bring a clamor for definite action. But if ever again European democracy is backed against a wall in a life and death struggle, it is inconceivable to those who understand American public opinion that the United States would long remain neutral.

And it would not be because Americans dislike Germans and Italians as a people or wish in any way to impair their national prestige. The kindliest feelings are held here toward those peoples—a sentiment so quickly brought to the surface by the Hindenburg disaster. What we dislike is their political system and philosophy and their efforts to impose their will on other peoples. Indeed we detest those things because at heart we remain true democrats.

Walsh Warns Of 'Abolishing' Supreme Court

If the Supreme Court acepts the tenets in the Government's brief filed in the pending social security act case, the result will be "to abolish it (the court) entirely insofar as enactments of Congress are concerned," according to Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., regent of Georgetown University's schol of foreign service.

Dr. Walsh spoke last night in Memorial Continental Hall, concluding his series of ten lectures on "The Constitution and the Supreme Court."

The speaker quoted from the Government's brief. "'Whether any particular expenditure is for the general welfare is a matter completely within the determination of Congress. In any event, the decision of Congress is not reivewable by the courts if by any reasonable possibility it is for the general welfare.'"

Admitting it is "fantastic" to imagine the legislative cynicism of revolutionary governments existing ni the United States, he called it "legally possible under the theory defended in the Government's brief."

"I am not arguing for or against the constitutionality of the social security act," he added.

The speaker called attention to the record of the Supreme Court, pointing out htat it has invalidated only 75 statutes, in whole or in part, out of the 58,383 Federal statutes enacted since 1789.

Judicial Plan Backers Hail Berry Selection

New Tennessee Senator's Vote Certain for President's Proposal.

By the Associated Press.

Leaders in the fight for the Roosevelt court reorganization legislation rejoiced yesterday in the appointment of Maj. George L. Berry as Senator from Tennessee. Berry is a supporter of the legislation.

Since many legislators say the Senate is almost evenly divided on the measure and its provision for the possible addition of six justices to the Supreme Court, the appointment is regarded as of great potential importance in the tremendous struggle.

As a leader in Labor's Nonpartisan League and the Committee for Industrial Organization, Berry has been an aggressive champion of the court proposal since it was first advanced in early February.

His predecessor, the late Senator Bachman, had never committed himself on the bill publicly. Both sides had claimed his vote. His close friends, however, expressed the opinion that he was leaning toward the opposition.

The addition of Berry's name to the list of those publicly supporting the measure brought the total to 30. On the same basis, the opponents of the bill numbered 37.

Twenty-nine Senators had yet to state their positions.

Anxiously counting votes, the leaders of both sides had little doubt how most of these 29 ballots would ultimately be cast. Probably less than a half dozen Senators have given no inkling whatever of their position.

Repeated polls of the Senate have resulted in conflicting claims. Both sides assert that they will win by an extremely narrow margin. One well-informed source has predicted a tie, to be broken by the vote of Vice President Garner.

The Senate Judiciary Committee, a clear majority of which is opposed to the bill as it stands, will resume its consideration of the measure on Monday

Wants to Aid President.

Louisville, Ky., May 7 (AP).—Maj. George L. Berry announced today he would accept the appointment tendered him by Gov. Browning as Senator from Tennessee to fill the unexpired term of the late Nathan L. Bachman.

Berry, who has headed the "Little NRA" for several years, said, "I have accepted the appointment solely on the grounds of my ambition to help the President in all of his efforts to rehabilitate and stabilize our economic structure and, too, in order that I may be helpful to Gov. Browning in his great fight to readjust the administrative and financial situation in Tennessee."

Court Supported By Legion Group

Indianapolis, May 7 (AP).—The National executive committee of the American Legion voted tonight to reaffirm a previous policy which "condemned attacks" on the Supreme Court or "any effort to grant Congress judicial powers or authority now vested in the court."

There were only two dissenting votes to reaffirmation of the resolutions adopted at the 1922 and 1927 National conventions of the legion.

New York-Paris Race Will Be Held in August

flocked to Zamudio from other Basque villages.

Insurgent airmen confined most of their raids to villages outside Bilbao, although four forays were made over this city.

French warships massed off Bilbao to protect French vessels carrying more refugees from the besieged city. The French liner Carimare, scheduled to take out 1,000 persons, was delayed by fog. Two Spanish government ships previously took out 2,806 refugees and landed them in France today.

Rebellion Continues.

Barcelona, Spain (By Telephone to Paris,) May 7 (AP).—The anarchist rebellion against the Barcelona and Valencia governments continued today.

For four days there has been fighting in the city's streets. Telephone operators returned to work for the first time since Tuesday, but fighting still is not ended.

Within the city proper there is comparative quiet, but shooting still can be heard in the suburbs.

Police fill the streets and public order is under control of an officer from the Spanish Valencia government. But for the uniformed patrols, the Central Plaza Cataluna is deserted.

Reports from Cerbere, along the Franco-Spanish frontier, today said the revolt was spreading to towns and villages.

The anarchists seized Figueras, with the aid of Fort San Fernando soldiers, yesterday. Public officials were ousted at Figueras and at Gerone.

They battled with troops en route from Valencia to restore order, but the result was not known.

Two Refugee Ships Dock.

Bordeaux, France, May 7 (AP).—Two shiploads of hungry, bewildered Basque children taken from war-harassed Bilbao settled safely today in half a dozen French vacation camps.

They arrived this morning in the steamship Habana at La Pallice and in the pleasure yacht Izarra at Pauillac—2,153 children and 653 men and women.

PALL MALL
THE MODERN BLEND

Its straight tobacco flavour is unique

Pall Mall, The Modern Blend, is the only cigarette of its type without artificial flavouring. It gains its straight tobacco flavour solely from selected domestic tobaccos enriched by choice Oriental types. It leaves none of the usual unpleasant after-taste of artificial sweetening.

With no sugar-coating, the new Pall Mall follows the simple, thorough English blending method of the Turkish Pall Mall, famous as "A Shilling in London—A Quarter Here."

BluesDominate Mrs. Simpson's Marriage Garb

By the Associated Press.

That is the name given by the dressmaking firm of Mainbocher for a shade, especially dyed, described as having a soft tone between medium and pastel, "a very soft yet an individual blue."

The wedding dress will be of the long afternoon type in soft silk with a jacket to match.

Soft flower blues, such as forget-me-not, hyacinth, periwinkle and cornflower form an ensemble in romantic colors in the trousseau of the American-born woman soon to become the bride of the Duke of Windsor.

A darker shade of blue has been chosen by Mrs. Simpson for a going-away costume. Some have suggested that it be called "Windsor" or "Edward blue."

All of the blues are of clear shades, avoiding any greenish tinge in order to conform with the wearer's clear blue eyes and dark hair.

Her wedding ensemble is designed to give an illusion of height to Mrs. Simpson's slender form and birdlike grace.

Wood, 29, of the 3400 block of Eleventh street northwest, driver of one cab, suffered internal injuries. Beasley was taken to Walter Reed Hospital and Wood to Emergency.

Nellie Coker, 22, of Silver Spring, Md., passenger in the other cab, which was driven by James W. Startzman, 27, of the 800 block of Aspen street northwest, suffered a torn knee and thigh and the loss of several teeth. She was taken to Walter Reed. Startzman was uninjured.

Chairman La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, said yesterday he had received an invitation from a group of Harlan County, Ky., coal operators to make a personal investigation of labor cosditions there.

He said the operators offered to post a $50,000 bond to guarantee safety and to pay $100 a day expenses for each member of the Senate committee making the trip.

The telegram containing the invitation was signed by T. R. Creech, on behalf of the operators' committee. L. Follette declined to comment on whether he might accept the invitation.

AnnulmentRefused For Saul Marriage

In an opinion made public yesterday, Justice Oscar R. Luhring in District Court refused to annul the marriage of Bernard F. Saul, to Mrs. Mary Harding Saul, in July, 1927.

The husband had sued for annulment on the theory his wife was not a legal resident of Tennessee, where she obtained a divorce from her first husband, and thus had not been lawfully divorced. With that contention Justice Luhring failed to agree. His opinion cited that Mrs. Saul had a legal residence and had obtained a valid decree in Tennessee prior to her marriage to Saul.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 7.—Bad news for ticket merchants appeared today as prices for seats along the coronation route tumbled like ringside berths at a blighted prize-fight spectacle.

For a mere $50 now, due to last-minute cancellations, you can buy a perch with a fine view of George VI and Queen Elizabeth leading the empire line through the heart of London Wednesday.

For that much, instead of the original asking price of $250, you can have champagne, luncheon, listen to the radio, and enjoy everything except breakfast in bed.

Only Jules Bach, 75-year-old New Yorker, will have that last boon and still see the procession. His seats are in Westminster Hospital stand, so he's entered himself and family there for the night just as though they were patients. He rises when he likes.

The latest anyone else can reach the stands is 6 a. m., if they want to be sure of even a reserved seat, although the procession from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abbey doesn't start until 9:30.

"Greatly reduced prices" was the cry through advertising columns as the Hindenburg disaster forced coronation news into the background.

About $100 per seat was the day's high.

The government with its 150,000 seats in specially built stands, including room for 40,000 children, is giving private business a hand by forbidding government employes to peek from their windows along the parade route. Ushers, presumably, will be allowed in free.

Meanwhile, new conferences on the week-old strike of London's 25,500 busmen ended tonight with no immediate prospect for terminating the walkout. A board official said the next move waited upon the union.

Games, Picnicking Are Set toCelebrate Dogwood Blossoms

Celebrating the blooming of 20,000 dogwood trees in the parks system, the office of National Capital Parks will sponsor "Dogwood Day" tomorrow, featuring outdoor games, picnicking, a campfire program and exhibition of a motion picture in natural color.

Fifteeen thousand of the blossoming trees are in Rock Creek Park, where the community observance will be held. Over half of them are in the loop bounded by Ross drive and Ridge, Grant and Military roads. Softball, horseshoe pitching, quoits, volley ball and games for children will be conducted at the playing fields near Military and Daniel roads.

Under direction of Winfree Johnson, assisted by staff members of the District Playground Department, the sports program will last from 2:30 to 5:30 p. m.

The campfire program will begin at 8 p. m., featuring community singing and showing of the film "Vacation Lands Within Our National Parks," by Earl A. Trager, chief naturalist of the National Park Service.

Supreme Court Asked To Hear Taft Gold Case

By the Associated Press.

Robert A. Taft asked the Supreme Court again yesterday to compel the United States to pay him $1.07 interest on a gold Liberty bond which was called in by the Treasury in advance of maturity date.

Taft appealed from a decision against him by the United States Court of Claims. Last term the high tribunal refused to decide the issue after Solicitor General Stanley Reed said the Court of Claims certificate did not contain a complete disclosure of the facts in the case.

Abe Plisco Fined $10 On Speeding Charge

Abe Plisco, 34, of the 1700 block Hobart street, alias William Dietz, recently arrested in one of a series of police gambling raids and released on bond, was fined $10 in Police Court yesterday for speeding.

Policeman A. D. Clark, of the Traffic Division, who arrested Plisco, told Judge Walter J. Casey that the defendant was driving 50 miles an hour on the Highway Bridge, Thursday afternoon. Pleading guilty, Plisco told the court that he was unaware he was traveling at that speed.

Mother of Two Convicted in Fatal Beating of Ward

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., May 7.—Mrs. Elva Sleighter, 29-year-old mother of two children, was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter by a Franklin County jury tonight in the fatal beating of Jean Seville, 6, her ward.

Her farmer-husband, Glenn Sleighter, was found guilty of first-degree murder last week. The jury recommended life imprisonment. Mrs. Sleighter's sentence will be from 6 to 12 years.

The child, obtained by the Sleighters from the Children's Aid Society, allegedly was whipped until she died. Her body was taken to the Bedford County Mountains, where it was found next day.

So dense was the crowd around the courthouse awaiting the verdict that when the doors were thrown open one woman was trampled and hurt severely in the rush for seats.

Mrs. Simpson Takes Edward Wine-Tasting

Still secret, however, was the date the couple has set for the marriage, although it was known invitations already have been prepared.

In an almost theatrical setting, beneath a majestic chestnut tree on the broad lawns of their chateau retreat, Edward and Mrs. Simpson posed this morning for photographers.

Both were in high spirits as they stood, Edward's hand supporting Mrs. Simpson's arm, facing a battery of ten cameramen.

"We are very happy, we always are very happy," the duke said, beaming, and Mrs. Simpson nodded her agreement.

Mrs. Simpson, whose wedding gown and trousseau reflect her preference for blue, was photographed in a sky-blue summer dress with a white collar. She wore a gold, gem-studded brooch. The duke was dressed in blue serge.

Expansion Studied By Maryland U.

Baltimore, May 7 (AP).—Plans for $1,170,000 construction work to be done at the schools of the University of Maryland were discussed today at the monthly meeting here of its board of regents. The State General Assembly has appropriated funds for the expansion program.

Dr. W. W. Skinner, chairman of the board, said the proposal for the work to be done at College Park, Baltimore and Princess Anne will be taken up for final action at the meeting to be held on June 4.

The board also prepared for the commencement exercises of the Baltimore and undergraduate schools to be held at College Park on June 5.

Garner, Party Off For Darby With Tip

"It's just plain Derby to me," Garner said, "but the crowd I'm going with said its pronounced Darby so I guess that's what it'll be. It still sounds pretty high toned to me."

Garner was in a party assembled by Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania.

Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress administrator, also was Louisville bound, with a "hot tip." He told friends it was Reaping Reward, on the nose.

Ga. Chief Justice Backs Court Plan

Attempt Is Made To Free Vessel In Potomac Mud

Two Coast Guard vessels yesterday were attempting to pull the Norfolk & Washington steamer Northland from a mud bank in the lower Potomac 55 miles from Washington where she ran aground Thursday night while en route to Norfolk with 130 passengers.

When the ship ran aground at 10:30 p. m. members of the crew went ashore in a lifeboat and telephoned for assistance. The steamer District of Columbia on its regular run to Washington from Norfolk came alongside early yesterday. Ninety passengers were transferred to the District of Columbia and were brought back here.

Some of the passengers included a fishing party of about 35 Washington dentists, who decided to remain aboard. They expected to proceed to Oregon Inlet, N. C., later yesterday. The ship apparently was undamaged, company officials said.

Theaters Over United States To Be Picketed

1,000,000 Will Take Part; Producers' Rift With Actors Closing.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, May 7.—An announcement by film strike leaders that Nation-wide theater picketing will begin Monday was followed by a prediction from screen producers' spokesmen that their differences with the Screen Actors Guild will be settled.

Charles Lessing, business manager of the striking Federated Motion Picture Crafts, said more than 1,000,000 men and women will go on picket duty.

From Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the producers' committee which is negotiating with the actors' guild, came this statement:

"Proposals submitted to the motion picture producers' committee by a committee representing film actors were discussed today at a full meeting of the major studio executives.

"On most of the important points raised by the actors' representatives there is full accord among the producers. Practically all the remaining items under discussion can, in my opinion, be ironed out to the satisfaction of both sides."

Picketing, Lessing said, will be concentrated on major cities.

Lessing said he had accepted offers for picketing help proffered by Louis Weinstock, secretary-treasurer of District Council, No. 9, Brotherhood of Painters; the Committee for Industrial Organization, and the International Longshoremen's Association.

He designated New York, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Minneapolis, St. Paul and other cities as first objectives. If necessary, he added, picketing will spread.

Lessing said he had decided on this move without regard for the decision of the Screen Actors Guild when it confers with producers' representatives tonight or at its own meeting Sunday night.

Earlier, Lessing had predicted the actors' guild would vote to join the walkout and that "every studio in town will be closed Monday."

Edward A. Fitzgerald, representative of Secretary of Labor Perkins, arrived here today to study the strike situation.

Rep. Walter Reports Robbery of Apartment

Annual Dinner Held Here by Law Institute

Legal minds sparkled last night as members of the American Law Institute gathered at the Hotel Mayflower to hold their fifteenth annual dinner.

Led by President George Wharton Pepper, former Senator from Pennsylvania, the speakers departed sharply from the dry-as-dust legal tradition.

W. Barton Leach, Harvard Law School professor, praised the institute for "educating the educators" and so bettering the quality of students turned out by the law schools. This alone, he said, made the money spent to found the institute worth while. He explained:

"One of the fundamental propositions upon which the institute was founded was that there was nothing a school teacher would not do for $25 a day—and this has proved absolutely sound. Lured by the siren song of five $5 bills per diem some 80 to 100 law professors have gathered together for an average of 20 days a year for serious interchange of ideas upon the substance of the specialties they profess."

Work Is Criticized.

Most of Prof. Leach's speech was devoted to a criticism of the institute's work in restating laws. At first, he declared, members had the idea that the restatement would stand upon its own authority, that "it would give no reasons, would cite no authority, would state no history, would concede no doubt or divergence."

He traced the trend away from this idea and summarized by saying:

"To me the essential aspect of the present situation is that we are well on the road to recovery from a pretty serious institutional Jehovah complex. The important thing for us to do is to admit it to the world. Nothing but good can come from such frankness with ourselves and with those whom we serve."

Education Law Cited.

Dr. John Stewart Bryan, president of William and Mary College, outlined the growth of law education in the United States and in England. He pointed out that any student must have an adaptability for the law. Otherwise, he said, it doesn't make much difference what school he attends.

In an introductory speech that highly amused the lawyers, judges and professors, Pepper laughingly declared himself "all for the new unlearning" and deplored the collection of "legal bric-a-brac" he had accumulated during the past half century.

Adoption Case Bill Indorsed by Bureau

Indorsement of the District bill to alter proceedings in adoption cases was voiced yesterday by the Bureau of Rehabilitation, of 424 Fifth street, northwest.

J. E. Dayton, director, wrote Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, that he approved the measure. He explained that his bureau, an agency of the Community Chest, often deals with adoption cases.

Report Shows Gains In Airplane Traffic

A substantial gain in airplane traffic during March, 1937, over March, 1936, was reported by the Bureau of Air Commerce yesterday.

The report showed 20 scheduled domestic airlines flew nearly five and a half million miles, carrying 74,972 passengers.

A year ago less than five million miles were flown, and about 70,000 passenger carried.

Wants High Tariff.

Tallahassee, Fla., May 7 (AP).—The Florida House today adopted a resolution asking Congress for protective tariffs on imported vegetables and fruits from Cuba, Mexico and smaller countries which compete with Florida-grown products.

Revolver Given To Mrs. Shelby Linked to Death

Police Seek Gift Weapon of Mary Minter's Mother.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, May 7.—A tiny pearl-handled pistol that once belonged to the mother of Mary Miles Minter, star of the silent screen, was sought by detectives tonight as officials pushed a new investigation of the 15-year-old slaying of Film Director William Desmond Taylor.

Meanwhile, Grand Jury Foreman John Bauer said that body awaited a final report on two new avenues of inquiry—furnished, he said, in testimony of Miss Minter, her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, and her sister, Mrs. Margaret Fillmore. The jury will resume its study of the case next week.

Miss Minter was Taylor's sweetheart at the time he was shot and killed.

"For the first time in a number of years," Deputy District Attorney Eugene Williams declared, "the Taylor case file is nearly complete. I am convinced that with the forging of one or two more links, we will be able to name the murderer."

The pearl-handled pistol that Mrs. Shelby said was given her by Harry Eaves, Santa Barbara jeweler, became a focal point in the inquiry after her grand jury appearance yesterday.

"They asked me if I ever owned a gun," she said when she left the grand jury room. "I told them I had. It was a little thing, practically a toy, given me by Mr. Eaves.

"I only shot it once when he was teaching me how to handle it. I haven't the slightest idea what's become of it."

Miss Minter's two diaries, reported to contain information about her romance with Taylor, failed to throw any light on the case, District Attorney Fitts said.

Suspect in $25,000 Holdup Captured

Indianapolis, May 7 (AP).—Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, battled and captured a man today who Bliss Morton, acting chief of the local bureau, said is wanted in connection with a $25,000 bank holdup in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Morton said the man gave his name as Ray C. Stevenson but gave no home address. The Hall street branch of the National Bank of Grand Rapids was held up by three men armed with sawed off shotguns. They escaped in a car driven by a fourth man.

The man captured here fought with two agents who stopped him as he left St. Vincent's Hospital. The man was beaten severely and was returned to the hospital for treatment.

Salesmen and Bakers Strike At Two Plants in Washington

Former, Whose Contract Expired April 30, Demand Percentage of Collections Over $175 Weekly; Employers Ready to Grant $2 Raise.

Salesmen at the Holmes Modern and the Dutch Baker Boy Bakeries went on strike yesterday, demanding an increase in wages. They were joined by bakers at the plants.

A spokesman for the Employing Bakers Association stated last night that the association was willing to grant the salesmen's demands for an increase from $38 to $40 a week in contract pay.

This spokesman said the real difference between the salesmen and their employers is a demand that the men receive 24 per cent of all gross collections over $175 a week.

The strike was called by the local branch of the Bakery Salesmen's Union. Its members were joined by members of Bakers Union, No. 118. The contract between employers' association and the salesmen's union expired at midnight April 30. It had been in effect several months following a previous strike.

According to Robert Lester, union business agent, the salesmen have taken losses on bad credit which they have to make good each week.

Ickes Asserts Bill On Sugar Is Unfair

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes complained to the House Agricultural Committee yesterday a subcommittee recommendation for fixing sugar production quotas discriminated against Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

Ickes' criticism aligned him with Secretaries Wallace and Hull in opposition to the sub-committee bill.

The Interior chief said proposed quotas for the island possessions were too small and "would violate the principle of fair treatment."

He also objected that "restrictions would be placed on the right to engage in refining operations in only the insular parts of the United States."

He cited the April 30 statement of Secretary Hull that United States consumers had to pay approximately $350,000,000 in excess of world prices for their sugar last year.

Rumania Refuses Pact With Il Duce

Paris, May 7 (U.P.).—French officials were told informally tonight that Rumania has refused a proposal for a treaty of friendship and non-aggression with Italy similar to the pact which Premier Mussolini recently signed with Yugoslavia.

The French considered Rumania's action a major rebuff for Mussolini, who has been attempting to build a diplomatic wall across the Balkans to protect his rear so that he can push actively his forward policy in Spain.

Capt. Lehmann Dies of Burns As Hindenburg Dead Reach 33

'I Can't Understand It,' Veteran of Dirigibles Says on Death Bed; 3 Other Officers in Serious Condition.

gas was the secondary cause of the disaster.

The mystery lay in what ignited it.

A sudden spark somewhere near the stern as the gleaming air liner nosed toward its mooring mast at the end of the season's first voyage from Frankfort turned it into a blazing torch before the eyes of horrified spectators.

Some of those aboard jumped to the ground. Others were blown from their cabins by a series of dull explosions. Flaming from end to end, its gaunt aluminum framework already exposed, the 803-foot dirigible settled slowly to the ground, stern first.

The horror and confusion at the scene lasted throughout the night. Naval authorities closed the station to civilians. Daylight found the field fairly cleared and late today weary searchers thought all bodies had been removed from the wreckage.

Bodies of the dead—two more were recovered during the day—were laid out in an improvised morgue. Many of them were horribly seared, making identification difficult.

Swarms of curiosity seekers were turned back miles from the saucer-like air station which has housed other ill-starred dirigibles—the Shenandoah, the Akron and the Macon.

Most of the 64 persons who had booked passage for the return flight to Germany, which was to have started at midnight last night, planned to sail tomorrow on the Italian liner Rex. They will arrive in Europe too late for the coronation ceremonies.

Capt. Lehmann, at 51, was one of the most famous of the German dirigible commanders. He had had a brilliant military career in the German air service, had commanded the Graf Zeppelin on most of her 100 voyages between Germany and Brazil and was made executive officer of the Hindenburg when the giant airship was first commissioned.

Served in War.

Capt. Lehmann's early experiences fitted him peculiarly for the career in which he was afterward to attain such renown.

The son of a chemist, he was born on the shores of Lake Constance, where the latter spent much time supervising the construction and the handling of the huge airships which were then being developed by Count Zeppelin.

Filled with a love for the water and for adventure on the high seas, he spent two years training on a sea-cadet ship. Then for six years he attended Charlottenburg Technical College and gained the expert knowledge which afterward helped to bring him success.

After his graduation he was assigned to duty at the imperial navy yard at Kiel and a year later went directly into the service in which he was to live and die. He was given command of the airship Sachsen for the Ferman Airship Co. at Frankfort.

Was on Graf Zeppelin.

When the World War broke out and Germany flung all her resources into the fight for victory, Lehmann continued his command for the army. During the next three years he commanded the Sachsen and four other airships.

In 1917, his technical ability recognized, Lehmann was put in charge of development work on war airships for the navy.

The German captain's exploits with the five dirigibles he commanded won him the Iron Cross, both first and second class, and several other decorations.

The war over, and airships no longer vehicles for raining death by night on frightened cities, Lehmann became an officer of the Luftschiffbau Zeppelin, German air transportation company.

In 1928 he was assigned to the Graf Zeppelin and was a leader in the transatlantic voyages which surprised the world with their ferry-like schedules.

Capt. Lehmann was author of many popular and technical articles on lighter-than-air craft and was co-author of the book, "The Zeppelin." His articles appeared in both American and European periodicals.

After the Hindenburg flew over Washington last summer, Lehmann was among the officers who were guests at the German Embassy. At that time he met many prominent Washingtonians.

Lakehurst Parade of Sorrow Is Tragic Aftermath of Blast

By the Associated Press.

Point Pleasant, N. J., May 7.—A woman with her two small sons beside her, all seriously burned in the Hindenburg disaster, pleaded today to see her daughter. But the girl had died of burns at 3 a. m.

Mrs. Mathilda Doehner, of Mexico City, was too ill to be told this, and that her husband, Hermann Doehner, also was believed to have perished in the Hindenburg's wreckage.

The Doehner boys, Walter, 10, and Werner, 6, were just one of the tragic sights in the region of Lakehurst, where every hospital had its quota of bruised and burned survivors.

The Doehner family was on its way home to Mexico City after a trip to Germany. Doehner was a well-to-do importer.

The mother and children were finishing dinner in the great ship's dining salon when the explosion came.

Irene, the daughter, had slipped out to watch the dirigible's descent to its mooring mast.

In the flames, as the ship dropped, Mrs. Doehner managed to get her two boys out and down to land.

After a long drive in separate ambulances, along roads lit by the headlamps of hundreds of cars and rushing motorcycles, four members of the family reached the Beach Boros Hospital in Point Pleasant.

Mrs. Elizabeth Richter, of Richmond Hill, N. Y., was one of the relatives who waited all day in the hospital corridor for encouraging word.

Late at night, the day nurses were still on duty, their food untouched.

Visitors lined up at information booths of hospitals, seeking word of their friends. Physicians and surgeons came and went, and nurses at switchboards answered the unending queries:

"Condition very good * * *"

"Fair, * * *"

Survivor Tells of Disaster's Horrors; Dramatic Photo as Ship Hits the Ground

Herbert O'Laughlin (right), of Chicago, who escaped death in the explosion of the Hindenburg by leaping from the blazing craft as it hit the ground, boards a plane for a Newark hospital.

AP Wirephotos—Paramount News.

One of the most remarkable pictures made at the tragic scene shows a survivor dashing from the blazing mass of twisted steel, while rescue workers, repeatedly driven back by the intense heat and suffering burns themselves, were about to rush forward to try to drag other victims to safety.

Airship's Crew Is Praised by F. L. Belin, Jr.

Tells of Saving Life by 30-Foot Jump From Cabin.

The crew of the ill-fated dirigible Hindenburg was not the least negligent, Ferdinand Lammot Belin, jr., son of the former Minister to Poland, who escaped death when he leaped 30 feet from a forward cabin window when the great airship burst into flames at Lakehurst, said yesterday.

He stood on the steps of his father's Colonial mansion at 1623 Twenty-eighth street northwest, and chatted casually.

The disaster seemed strangely remote in the spring day. The tanned youth looked as though nothing unusual had occurred and that his months of study in the Sorbonne in Paris had been climaxed by no joust with death.

"The crew," he asserted, "were perfectly swell—all of them. They were efficient, courteous and loyal."

Says Mood Was Cheerful.

The general spirit that prevailed aboard the air monster in her journey across the ocean was cheery, optimistic and "altogether as it should be on a smooth running liner," he asserted.

"There was not the slightest hint of anything amiss in the air," he said, as he gazed over the pleasant terrain of Evermay, the Georgetown estate where he grew to manhood.

From time to time he gazed skyward at the Goodyear blimp enterprise as she wheeled, bobbed and robbed on one of her routine flights above Washington's rooftops.

He did not seem to be a young man who had miraculously escaped death.

However young Belin avoided talking about the disaster as much as possible. He discussed particularly his days at St. Alban's School.

It was learned last night that Belin's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Lammot Belin, who had gone to meet their son, first knew he was alive and safe by his cheery whistle, which came out of the terror-stricken crowds. It was a whistle he had used since childhood.

The blast and the fire blinded and confused the Belins, and they were certain their son had perished with the others.

But half an hour later, above the din, the wailing of sirens and the sobbing of women, they heard the familiar whistle—one peculiar to the Belin family.

It was only then they knew their only child—Peter, as his friends call him—was safe.

Phones "Story" to Cousin.

Belin returned to the quiet Georgetown estate yesterday. He spent Thursday night in Princeton, where he telephoned the story of his experiences to his cousin, G. D'Andelot Belin, chairman-elect of the Yale Daily News, at New Haven, Conn.

"The cabin I was in lurched to a 45-degree angle," Belin said.

"We were all thrown toward the back, although two stewards and I caught hold of posts which kept us from being thrown in a heap with the others.

"A terrific explosion crumpled the whole rear end while the ship was dropping from 175 to about 30 feet from the ground. After a look toward the back of the capin where about 12 passengers were pitched helplessly together on their backs, the two stewards jumped, and I followed.

"We landed in a sandy place without injury, and ran from under the ship which had now burst into flames and seemed about to fall right on top of us."

Hitler Answers Roosevelt Letter On Airship Crash

Galveston, Tex., May 7 (AP).—President Roosevent spent his tenth day at sea today clearing up another batch of official mail before setting out in a small launch to visit some friends and returning to Port Aransas for more fishing.

Meanwhile, it was announced at White House headquarters here the President would make a brief informal talk next Tuesday afternoon in the stadium of Texas A. and M. College, near Bryan, Tex., where he will review the cadets on his return journey to Washington.

The President received a message from Adolf Hitler thanking him for his expression of sympathy over the Hindenburg crash.

Senate Group Moves to Make Helium Available to World

Committee Approves Loosening of Restrictions on Sale, Export of Gas After Announcement Hindenburg Tragedy Was Caused by Hydrogen Blast.

high content of 1.8 per cent of the natural gas supply. At an average production of 10,000,000 cubic feet a year, it would last 180 years, Cattell said.

Helium is non-inflammable, tasteless, odorless, invisible, and nonpoisonous. Scientists term it "the most remarkable of gases." Fifteen years ago it was obtainable in small quantities only at the fabulous cost of $2,500 a cubic foot. Now the Government can produce the same quantity for a penny.

Helium's lifting power is second only to hydrogen, and yet it has none of its explosive hazards. Besides its value to aeronautics, it has recently discovered medical uses in treating asthma and pneumonia.

Interest of the American Zeppelin Corporation, which has been studying the feasibility of new Zeppelin construction for commercial transatlantic air traffic, had been credited with supplying impetus behind yesterday's Senate move to loosen the Government's hold on the element.

But the Hindenburg's crash, plus the recommendations of three Cabinet officers, shook it free from the committee yesterday with unexpected haste. Only a short hearing had been held on helium's valuable medical qualities, it was learned. Earlier a House committee had held fuller hearings, but had taken no action.

Wrote Secretary of War Woodring to Senator Sheppard:

"It would appear that the proposed legislation would have no appreciable effect on the export market because of the small amounts involved, and approval of the President is required before exportation is made."

Wrote Secretary of the Navy Swanson, interposing no objection:

"Conceivably, one result of the proposed bill may be cheaper helium for naval purposes because larger quantities will probably be produced in the Government plant to meet the requirements of commercial users. The matter of conservation of helium resources does not appear to be materially involved."

Under present laws, the Government sells none of its helium, and produces less for its own use, since the Akron, with its 6,500,000 cubic foot capacity, crashed. But it leases the indestructible element for private use, and 1,000,000 cubic feet is now under lease to the Goodyear-Zeppelin corporation.

The only important private supply, drawn from about 16,000 acres of natural gas near Dexter, Kans., and Thatcher, Colo., is controlled by the Helium Co., a division of the Girdler Corporation. Due to the high cost on a low-production basis, the company has practically abandoned operations, but is still making some commercial sales.

Under the bill reported yesterday by the Senate Military Affairs Committee, the Government would not sell directly abroad, but could sell commercially to Americans, who could resell it in small quantities abroad.

Most of the export shipments have contained less than 200 cubic feet, whereas thousands of cubic feet are required to fill even the smallest lighter-than-air craft. The proposed liberalization of the law would permit the President jointly with the three Cabinet officers to frame regulations to allow small exportations without specific permits, and somewhat larger shipments on the delegated authority of the Secretary of Interior.

Approval of All Four.

But exports to fill ships the size of the Hindenburg (7,000,000 cubic feet) would require the approval of all four, in line with the recommendation of Secretary Ickes that:

"Probably exports of helium in quantities of the magnitude required for airship operation should continue to receive consideration of the three secretaries and the President."

Secretary Ickes wrote Vice President Garner the commercial market for helium is too small to enable private plants to supply it at a price consumers can afford to pay. Favoring passage of the helium bill, Ickes said his department has been importuned with commercial requests for helium from the Amarillo surplus.

"It is believed to be in the interest of the national defense to encourage development of lighter-than-air craft," said Ickes, "so that in times of emergency privately owned ships and trained crews will be available to supplement defense agencies. An essential element in such commercial development is availability of low-priced helium. Also it seems that sale of helium from the Government plant at a reasonable price for use in medical treatment will help to relieve human suffering."

One of the Capitol crusaders for Government recognition of helium's potentialities is Representative Fritz G. Lanham (Democrat), Texas. Lanham saw billions of feet of the gas in the Petrolia and Nocona fields near his Fort Worth home virtually go to waste. Both fields now are played out.

"It took a long time to sell the Government on helium," Lanham said yesterday, "and we still have to be educated."

Helium has 92 per cent of the lifting power of hydrogen and will not burn, Bureau of Mines officials pointed out yesterday. It was actually discovered in 1891 by Dr. W. F. Hillebrand, of the Geological Survey, but he thought it was nitrogen.

Years before, in 1868, J. Norman Lockyer discovered a line in the sun's spectrum he believed was produced by a substance then unknown on the earth. He coined the word "helium" to label it, from the Greek word for the sun, "helios."

Rediscovered on Earth.

It remained for an English professor of chemistry, William Ramsay, in conjunction with Lord Rayleigh, to rediscover helium on earth and know what he had found. It was not until its presence was discovered in natural gases in this country, by Cady McFarland, of the University of Kansas.

In 1918 the vast Amarillo deposit, which clinched this country's monopoly, was opened, and nine years later the Bureau of Mines began purchase of it. The Government reservation at Amarillo is said to contain 100,000,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas. Experts estimate 1,800,000,000 cubic feet of helium can be recovered from this.

Although extremely small quantities of helium have been discovered in Canada and Mexico and in Australia and New Zealand, Japan, Transylvania and Germany, the United States is the only country in the world in which helium-bearing gases in amounts sufficient for aeronautical production of helium have been found.

Cattell, the Bureau of Mines expert, pointed out yesterday that hydrogen, used by the Hindenburg, becomes explosive when 4 per cent of air is introduced and will continue highly inflammable until the air content reaches 70 per cent. When the ship left Germany, he said, the hydrogen was pure, but as air was introduced en route it became more and more explosive. He said hydrogen will burn in its pure state, but not explode.

"From what I have read, there were no particularly violent explosions in the Hindenburg, and that indicates only a small amount of air was present in the hydrogen. But what produced it, what fired the gas and where, even an investigation may not determine."

Germany is said to obtain hydrogen for its dirigibles at $2 per 1,000 cubic feet. The net operating cost of the Government's Amarillo plant has been about $8.84 per 1,000 cubic feet, but it is estimated this could be reduced to $5 with larger operating capacity. Considering the indestructible quality of helium, and its availability for use over and over again, helium is said to be as cheap as or cheaper than hydrogen for Army and Navy use.

Prices Still Too High.

From a private commercial standpoint, sales are still outside the reach of the average consumer, even for medical purposes. Private price quotations, formerly at $75 a 1,000 feet, have recently jumped to $100.

Stressing its many versatile uses, Cattell pointed out yesterday its potentialities in deep-sea diving, when helium and nitrogen are mixed. As helium is insoluble in the blood stream, divers are enabled to reach very low depths without risk of the dreaded "bends" disease.

Dr. Barack cited instances where it had saved lives of asthma and pneumonia victims, although he pointed out the gas in proper mixture relieves, rather than cures.

But Dr. Barack pointed out that a 6,000-liter tank, which can be used up by a patient in a day, costs $30 from private concerns, and "only the wealthy" can receive its benefits. He said the Government, under the pending bill, might sell it for $4 or $5 a tank.

Irish Group Elects.

Society of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick yesterday announced the following officers elected Thursday night at a meeting at the Mayflower Hotel:

President, Daniel J. Callahan to succeed Arthur O'Brien; first vice president, George H. O'Conor; second vice president, John W. Guider; treasurer, Thomas J. Crowley; secretary, Martin J. McNamara; and historian, William P. Kennedy.

Pope Extends Sympathy.

Mississippi Nears Top of Flood Dike

Charleston, Mo., May 7 (AP).—First the river and then men pushed ahead in the race tonight of an army of levee workers to win over a flood threat of the rising Mississippi.

The river in some places came within four inches of the top of an emergency 7,000-foot dirt and timber bulkhead being thrown up about a gap in the levee guarding the Birds Point-New Madrid floodway.

Lieut. Granville H. Peets, in charge of CCC enrollees toiling on the levee with WPA workers and volunteer southeast Missouri farmers and sharecroppers, estimated the fight against inundation of the lower half of the 131,000-acre basin was costing $25,000 a day.

U. S. Officials Push 3 Inquiries Into Cause of Airship Disaster

Authorities Differ Over Effect Upon Future of Lighter-Than-Air Travel; Plans for Four Blimps Pushed.

Lieut. Col. E. de F. Chandler, retired, Col. Harold E. Hartney, technical adviser to the Copeland committee, and Gill Robb Wilson, director of aviation for New Jersey.

Fred D. Fagg, director of the Bureau of Air Commerce; Maj. Schroeder, and Col. Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, already are at Lakehurst conducting a preliminary study of the crash.

Speaking of a lighter-than-air craft construction program, Secretary of the Navy Swanson said in a statement:

"The Hindenburg tragedy will not adversely affect the Navy's decision in this matter because it resulted from a hydrogen fire and American ships use instead of the highly inflammable hydrogen an inert gas helium which, while it has less lifting power than hydrogen, does not either burn or explode.

"The matter has received and will continue to have our fullest consideration."

Two Predict Bad Effect.

Dr. Durand, whose committee was appointed at the request of the Navy Department early in 1935, was quoted by the Associated Press from Palo Alto, Calif., as saying:

"Destruction of the Hindenburg may seriously retard progress of development of aircraft in the United States.

"Use of hydrogen gas has no bearing, but the psychological effect will react against Congress granting funds for new ships."

Senator Copeland, after sending Hartney to Lakehurst to study the situation there, said:

"There are two things I want to learn—whether there was any sabotage connected with the disaster, and the type of material used in the interior construction of the dirigible."

He said he did not "suppose" there had been sabotage but wanted to be sure. He wants to learn whether wood or other such substance was used in the paneling and how to trim such a ship to restrict the spread of flames. Saying the disaster would have a "very damaging" effect on aviation, he declared he hoped to have a hearing that would promote safer construction.

The Bureau of Mines started its own investigation in view of its connection with production of helium gas, used in American ships.

Officials See Films.

High Navy officials yesterday silently viewed motion pictures taken while the Hindenburg was blazing in the air, seeking to learn all that was possible of the explosion and crash.

At the same time, Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Army Air Corps, announced that the Army will discontinue use of its four semi-rigid blimps on June 30 due to restrictions placed on use of the Army's appropriations. The Army has many free and captive balloons, scattered at Army posts.

Development of autogyros for use in place of the balloons and blimps is under way, Gen. Westover said.

Dr. Hans Luther, German Ambassador, returned to the Capital last night from Lakehurst, where he had flown immediately upon receiving word of the disaster.

Saying that the German and American governments were working in close co-operation in studying all phases of it, he added:

"There are two things left to do. The first is to take care of the unfortunate victims; the second is to conduct a very close and careful investigation of the cause of the explosion."

Luther Praises Heroism.

He praised the heroism of those who had rushed into the flames to save lives of passengers and members of the crew.

"There were many acts of heroism for which we cannot find too high words of praise," he said.

"Many lives were saved by persons on the ground who rushed into the flames to rescue victims."

Earlier, speaking on the radio to this country and Germany, Dr. Luther said "no one knows" what had caused the explosion. Later he said he had heard from Chancellor Hitler, adding that "his attitude is just what I have expressed. No one knows how it happened."

Possibility that a "cold spark," such as have caused innumerable blasts in threshing machines and cotton gins, might have been responsible for the dirigible's destruction was advanced by Dr. David J. Price, blast expert for the Agriculture Department. This theory involved collection of static electricity in the ship and a rope being thrown over the side to the ground crew causing the spark. When atmospheric conditions are suitable, static electricity frequently ignites gas, Dr. Price said.

A radio message from Herman Goering, German minister of air navigation, was received at the State Department. Replying to the condolences of President Roosevelt, it said:

"In connection with the destruction of the German airship Hindenburg, by force majeure at the Lakehurst airport, the American rescuers have displayed a high degree of self-sacrifice and initiative in the disaster and the American people have shown cordial sympathy.

"I, therefore, beg your excellency to accept my sincere thanks, as well as those of German aviators, for the help rendered and sympathy shown. I express my special condolences on the loss of life of American citizens in the disaster."

Lehmann's Book Tells of Airship Hit by Lightning

New York, May 7 (AP).—Capt. Ernst Lehmann, veteran dirigible commander who perished in the Hindenburg disaster, tells in a book soon to be published of having once been in an airship that was struck by lightning.

He was returning from an air raid on Hull, England, during the World War when the incident occurred.

"While we were moving the horizontal controls in order to dive as steeply as possible, I remembered the man on top of the ship. Just then he called to me on the speaking tube: 'A lightning bolt struck the nose of the ship, 30 feet from my post. It almost knocked me down just as I was going to report that there were electrical discharges around me. Tongues of fire are licking around the muzzles of my machine guns, and around my head, too. And when I spread my hand, little flames spurt out of my fingertips.' * * *" he wrote.

"Lightning, too, obeys the laws of nature. It is distributed only on the enormous surface of the metallic airship frame which protectively encloses the gas cells like a Faraday cage. Thus, as long as the airship pilot himself—and it lies entirely within his power—takes care that no inflammable gas forms between the cells and the outer envelops, lightning is no danger at all for a Zeppelin."

After reviewing the history of lighter-than-air aviation he concluded: "The fight to conquer the air has ended in the defeat of the elemental forces to nature."

Berlin Orders Inquiry Into Air Disaster

pressed similar sentiments in a radio broadcast.

A saddened Germany ordered her experts to America to determine whether lightning or mechanical fault sent the proud Hindenburg crashing in flames.

There was a cry for noninflammable helium from the 69-year-old Dr. Eckener who designed the Hindenburg, floated with explosive hydrogen.

But the big question was whether the government would permit the Zeppelin company to buy helium gas from the United States, which holds a monopoly, if that country decided to sell it. Helium is expensive and might prove a drain on Germany's closely controlled foreign exchange.

The sorrowful Dr. Eckener headed the investigators who will fly to Cherbourg and board the liner Europa tomorrow, and it was he who set forth possible causes of the crash.

Sabotage must be considered, he told Vienna newspapermen before flying here today, but it is most unlikely. A bullet fired into the hydrogen bags could have set off the blast, but that "seems highly unlikely," he said.

Eckener listed three possibilities: Hydrogen released while the ship prepared to land and ignited by lightning or a spark; released water ballast forming a conduit with the earth and transmitting a spark from earth, or fire aboard from a cigarette, also unlikely.

Ludwig Duerr, constructor of the ill-fated ship, worked through the night in search of a clew from construction charts. He could not believe that static electricity could have ignited the hydrogen.

Duerr is a member of the investigating board, which also includes Prof. Bock, of the German Institute of Aeronautical Research; Herr Hoffmann, engineering expert; Prof. Max Dieckmann, Munich University aeronautical authority, and Lieut. Col. Joachim Breithaupt, of the air ministry.

The airship pioneer made it clear today that he believes it unwise ever again to endanger the lives of passengers with hydrogen.

"We must make an about-face. We must use helium, despite the fact it has not such a good lifting power," he said.

"I might point out that sabotaging helium-filled ships is much more difficult."

Asked if the Graf Zeppelin, regularly in service to South America, would be taken from schedule until helium is obtained, Eckener said:

"Yes, but I cannot say anything about our future schedule until I have talked with the air ministry and our company officials."

The air ministry, however, made no announcements and the schedule tonight had not been altered—the Graf is due to leave next Tuesday for South America.

There was apparent tonight widespread public reaction of sympathy for Eckener and his pioneers, comparable to that for the late Count Zeppelin when his Z-4 went up in flames in 1908.

Well Handled.

The current statement of the Federal Reserve System is of general interest because it is the first to appear since the May 1 increase in member-bank reserve requirements.

Of outstanding significance is the fact that the Reserve banks added only $50,000 to their holdings of Government securities in the week ended last Wednesday, indicating a virtual suspension of open-market buying. During the preceding week these same banks bought $39,657,000 of Government issues and during the four weeks ended April 28 they invested $96,013,000 in this manner.

These heavy purchases, undertaken for the purpose of stabilizing the Government bond market were made incidental to the adjustments which member banks had to make to meet the increased reserve requirements. The ease with which the changes were effected, and the orderly conditions now prevailing in the market for Government securities, are a tribute to the skill with which the Federal Reserve authorities have carried out their open-market operations.

Under present conditions, buying for purposes of stabilization is no longer required. The Reserve banks have, therefore, confined their operations during the past week to shifts in the character of their holdings, selling a limited amount of Government bonds and notes and adding to their bill holdings. This policy is a reassuring indication that the recent open-market buying was for stabilization purposes only, not designed to peg Government securities at artificially high levels.

Except as a temporary expedient open-market buying, which builds up member-bank reserves, cannot be reconciled with a policy of raising reserve requirements to reduce excess reserves. Indeed, if long continued, it would be equivalent to abandonment of efforts to lessen excess reserves and thereby check boom tendencies.

The success of present stabilization efforts, however, must not obscure the necessity of effecting fundamental reforms in our fiscal policy. Stabilization operations may temporarily provide a basis for orderly trading in Government issues. But they are no protection against the deep-seated disorders resulting from protracted deficit financing.

Responsibility for the elimination of dangers resulting from continuous borrowing to cover recurrent deficits does not lie with the Federal Reserve authorities. It centers upon the Administration and Congress. They alone can lay the foundation for an orderly bond market that can be relied upon to function in an orderly fashion, without artificial support.

The Juvenile Court Bill.

Approval of the juvenile court bill by the Senate District Committee should bring the protracted controversy over this measure to a definite close.

The bill was originally drawn after investigation of the best juvenile court legislation in the various States. It is patterned after a suggested standard act drawn up by a committee of eminent jurists with long experience in juvenile court procedure. Further improvements were made by a group in the House of Representatives which rewrote the bill with the object of eliminating all question as to its practicability and soundness of policy. The House passed it as a much needed reform in the treatment of children accused of delinquency.

More recently, the entire issue has been examined by the Senate District Committee. In spite of some differences between the Corporation Counsel and sponsors of the bill, the committee has reported the measure with only minor amendments. None of these appears to obstruct the central purpose of the proposed legislation. On the contrary, some of the amendments would create additional safeguards for children taken before the court.

Under the bill as it now stands delinquent children would not be regarded as criminals but as wards of the Nation who should be turned from the path of crime by firm yet sympathetic treatment. It will permit neither the prosecution of children nor exploitation of their offenses. The entire purpose of the law is not to punish but to reclaim. That admirable aim overshadows every other provision of the bill. It has enlisted widespread support for the measure despite legalistic objections that continue to be raised.

When a bill with such a desirable purpose has weathered so many critical tests there should be no question as to its enactment. The Senate can now vote on the subject with ample assurance that this far-reaching change in juvenile court procedure will advance child welfare without detracting from the effectiveness of law enforcement. In view of these circumstances further delay would be difficult to excuse.

The Tragedy At Lakehurst.

Dirigibles have provided a disproportionate share of the world's major tragedies in recent years. Disaster has stalked the lighter-than-air craft of every nation. Until Thursday Germany alone seemed to have mastered the art of navigating the skies in great liners filled with special gases to give them buoyancy. Now the majestic Hindenburg is a tragic wreckage of twisted steel, and many of the technicians who handled her so beautifully are dead.

Sympathy goes out to the great German nation as well as to the relatives of these martyrs in the cause of progress. The skill of Dr. Hugo Eckener and his associates in developing and flying giant aircraft all over the world has been universally admired. Where the United States, Great Britain, France and Italy all failed to perfect dependable ships, the Germans were believed to have succeeded, by more careful attention to structural details and expert operation.

Plans for a joint German-American air line across the Atlantic collapsed when the Macon went to pieces in February, 1935. But the Germans persevered and established regular transatlantic service with their own craft. They had no helium to hold their monstrous air bags aloft. Only the United States has an ample supply of this rare nonexplosive gas. But until the Hindenburg fell in a mass of flames their rigid precautions had averted the menace of explosion which seems ever present when hydrogen is used.

Looking back at the record, it is remarkable that Germany carried the development of passenger airships so far without a disaster of this sort. Sparks may originate in many ways and despite all precautions. The fact that the origin of this explosion is as yet unknown tends to emphasize the potential dangers of riding through the air beneath a huge bag filled with highly inflammable gas.

And that defect cannot be overcome in the construction of German airships, unless the United States is willing to dispose of its treasured helium for that purpose. Germany leads in the skill required to build and operate lighter-than-air craft. But the United States has a monopoly on the only known gas that will make their operation really safe.

Since the United States long since abandoned the use of hydrogen in its airships, the Hindenburg tragedy should have no effect upon the policy of the Navy with respect to craft of this sort. But it raises unpleasant doubts as to the justification of preventing other countries from utilizing our helium supply for commercial or scientific use. Experts believe that the Government has at Amarillo, Tex., helium resources enough to last 200 years at the current rate of usage. Exports are forbidden, however, except through permits granted by the President on recommendation from the Secretaries of War, Navy and Interior.

No requests for export of helium for foreign dirigibles have been made. It is assumed, however, that the War Department might look with some disfavor upon granting petitions of that sort, on the ground that even commercial aircraft thus supplied might be turned against this country in time of war. With the entire world drawing upon the American helium supply, moreover, it might soon be exhausted. On the other hand, there is more than enough here for our predictable needs.

Will passengers again trust their lives to an inflammable airship? The catastrophe at Lakehurst will inevitably strike heavily at public confidence in lighter-than-air craft as a means of transportation. And Dr. Eckener, the dirigible wizard, seems to be of the opinion that without the use of helium that blow will be permanent in its effects.

Toward Liberalism In Mexico.

The action of the Mexican supreme court in declaring unconstitutional the drastic religious law recently enacted in the State of Chihuahua may help bring the thorny problem of church-state relations in that republic nearer a constructive solution.

In contrast with certain of his predecessors, President Lazaro Cardenas has shown a moderate attitude on the church question. But the authorities in some of the states have remained as virulently anti-Catholic as ever. In Chihuahua, for instance, the new law specifically prohibited more than one priest from exercising religious duties. It was, on the face of it, a harsh and punitive measure, entirely incompatible with any concept of religious freedom. Laws of equal harshness are also on the books in Chiapas and Tabasco.

In ruling that the Chihuahua law is contrary to the letter and spirit of Article 130 of the constitution, the Mexican supreme Court did not prohibit the individual states from restricting the number of priests on the basis of population. But it did declare that in fixing that number arbitrarily at one, the legislature went beyond its authority. That sort of reasoning has a familiar ring in Washington.

This decision will be gratifying not only to the Catholic Church in Mexico, but also to President Cardenas. The new deal he has been seeking in church-state relations should help strengthen Mexico's internal stability and further its best interests.

The Problem Of Sugar Control.

It is rumored that President Roosevelt will not hesitate to veto the sugar control bill if it is approved by Congress in its present form.

Such action would be wholly justified. The bill as it emerged from a sub-committee of the House is objectionable on at least two counts. It does violence to the Administration's reciprocal trade policy, and it makes an invidious distinction between continental and offshore United States just as though Puerto Rico and Hawaii were not under the American flag.

To the general purposes and provisions of the bill the Administration does not and cannot object. Indeed, the President has recommended that the quota system of sugar production embodied in the Jones-Costigan act, which expires December 31, be made permanent. The aim has been to safeguard an essential industry, while at the same time not unduly penalizing the consumer. In line with this purpose parallel measures were introduced in the two houses of Congress by Representative Jones and Senator O'Mahoney.

The House sub-committee to which the Jones bill was referred then proceeded to effect changes that are difficult to justify from the viewpoint of public policy. Hawaii and Puerto Rico have rightly objected to the provision restricting the amount of refined sugar that may be sent to continental United States by those island territories.

Such action would do violence to the principle of free trade, under the American flag, by discriminating between the 48 States, on the one hand, and the island territories, on the other. An extremely dangerous precedent might thus be established. To be sure, similar quota restrictions were embodied in the Jones-Costigan act. But this was admittedly an emergency measure for a limited duration and not, as the present legislation is supposed to be, permanent in nature.

Objection has also been raised by the State Department to the quota allotments to foreign countries. Under the amended measure, Cuba's present quota of 1,922,423 tons would be cut by 102,000 tons, while, at the same time, Cuba would be deprived of its present privilege of exporting 130,000 tons of refined sugar to the United States.

This, as Secretary Hull has charged, is in violation of the spirit of the Cuban-American reciprocal trade pact in which each nation pledged itself not to impose on the trade of the other restrictions not applied at home.

The Administration has recognized the wisdom of permitting some moderate expansion in the production of sugar in the United States. But if this expansion tends to inhibit exports of our industrial and agricultural products to other sugar-growing nations the net result may be injurious rather than beneficial.

As a result of the Cuban-American trade treaty our exports to that country have shown a striking increase. The sugar control bill in its present form might reverse this salutary development. No wonder, then, that the Department of State, the Departments of Commerce and Agriculture, together with the division of territories and insular possessions of the Department of the Interior, are demanding a return to the original form of the bill.

The Unconquerable Urge.

While submerged by the horror of the Hindenburg disaster, there is a certain offset in the miracle of modern invention which gave newspaper readers dramatic photographs of the actual tragedy within a few hours of its occurrence.

The Post, as the only daily morning paper in Washington with A. P. wirephoto service, was thus able to present in this city an immediate visual record of how the explosion appeared and what it meant in terms of human values. Other papers, similarly organized to focus totally unexpected events, carried the same visualization to cities much farther from the scene.

There is here a grim though fundamentally encouraging irony. Scientific advancement in one direction now permits practically instantaneous reproduction of a serious setback to scientific progress in a totally different field.

If the end were merely the picturization of disaster one would be inclined to question its value. But the end is not that. It is the conquest by human ingenuity of the innumerable obstacles which nature places in the path of progress.

The very fact that the destruction of the Hindenburg could be broadcast so quickly and so graphically holds promise that similar disasters will in time be rendered less probable by reason of man's inventive skill.

"Sin has become so cheap in this country that it's now possible to go to hell for a quarter," shouts a Texas evangelist. Competition in transportation gets keener every day.

Jobless Man's View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Under an entirely different perspective from the past, I find myself now unemployed. Uncle Sam has just moved me onto the sidewalk of freedom by way of a "furlough" which is quite in keeping with the desires of gluttonous business ideas and balance-the-budget reformists. To these same persons, I have during the past three weeks offered my services which in the past have been rendered to private business for the average wage of $50 a week. With six years of accounting experience and seven years of banking experience, all of which positions I resigned for my own betterment, I find today the wheels of destiny grinding on unmercifully to the destruction of millions of unemployed who cannot regain a hold upon the perpetual advance of bigotry and selfishness steering the wheels of industry.

The Supreme Court judges rest uncomfortable in their ease and luxury because a strong leader of the people has come forward and showed signs of an interest for the helpless and unemployed.

A few Senators and Congressmen have been unmindful of the prevailing chaos of society in the lower strata. But these Senators are not saving society from an over-packed Supreme Court, but heedlessly and unmercifully packing the streets and by-ways of all life with the derelicts of society. Out of the final decay of such minds and bodies as these, society eventually breeds revolution and "the few" are swept under by the tides of adversity. OUTSIDE.

Memorial And Auditorium.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is there not a possibility of combining the Jefferson Memorial plan with the civic auditorium plan of Mr. Ickes?

Everyone who has ever visited Monticello must have been impressed with the very practical nature of Mr. Jefferson's ideas. Hardly a room there but that gives evidence of his desire to make his house serve him to the utmost. I do not think he would have been opposed to the idea of a memorial taking the practical character of a civic auditorium, so badly needed in Washington by the Government and as a meeting place for civic associations of national scope.

The $3,000,000 which Congress apparently is disposed to spend for the memorial should certainly build a fine auditorium, a part of which might well be reserved as a shrine to the memory of our great President Jefferson.

And as for the cherry trees—requiescat. H. A. MERENESS.

Washington, May 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An auditorium could be located at the foot of East Capitol street which would be close to the Capitol. My idea is to have a large stadium linked to the auditorium. It should be constructed on the order of Franklin Field, Philadelphia, instead of having just the lower section covered, have the upper tier covered also. The stadium would in time pay for the entire auditorium and stadium.

They might be a Thomas Jefferson Memorial auditorium and stadium. When the auditorium is built it could be so constructed that one large room would be a museum pertaining to "Our third President."

Returning Fear.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Fear, that dreaded feeling of depression years, has again gripped our people. It comes back to haunt and taunt a New Deal Administration, which was supposed to have driven it out of existence four years ago.

The poor consumer fears the rising costs of living, the tenant fears the rising rents and the Government worker is afraid of losing his or her job.

Will communism, now alive, thrive over the distress that is brought about by the changing conditions?

Will the Gospel missions, the salvation halls the seaman's shelters, the municipal houses and the railroad shacks again come into their own—to hand out molded slices of hard bread and cake, stale buns, ptomaine-stained pork and week-old beef chips and black, washwatered, so-called coffee, and vermin-rampant cots and double-deckers to the forlorn, broken and bewildered homeless and unfortunate?

It is among such indigents and in such foul-smelling places that the Marxian theories grow. It takes a mighty strong-minded man to be able to resist that temptation.

If John L. Lewis and William Green and their opposing forces can only come to an amicable agreement, and the New Deal Administration and private business and industry can show a little more horsesense and co-operation, we need have no fear of anything.

AMERICAN.

Washington, May 3.

Sequel To The Harlan Inquiry.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Harlan County coal-mining inquiry ends. Scores of witnesses have paraded before the La Follette committee, painting a story of crime and murder. Law and order a mockery—innocent workers and their families terrorized by a band of officials operating under the protection of courts and law!

The Congressional committee has received its publicity, its findings have been broadcast throughout the Nation, and its chairman has become more or less of a popular hero among the working element of America for the startling exposures and his "bravery" in sparing no color for the picture! A good job, but what next?

It required no courage on the part of a Congressman to develop the picture, but it took real stomach for laboring men to come out of that Kentucky hell-hole and reveal to the country, at the risk of their lives, what has been going on down there. These witnesses have to go back to Harlan County, back to their homes, back and face the same bunch that has been beating them with clubs and pistols for years! Who is going to protect the unfortunates when they get home? "To the State of Kentucky," a Congressman asserts, "belongs that responsibility," but who thinks that Kentucky will arise to that responsibility and wipe out Harlan County outlawry now that Congress has investigated?

These things have happened before and the informers have usually turned out to be the goats. The principal reason crime exists in America today is because the average man realizes that when he goes on the stand and testifies to crime conditions, in hotbeds of crime like Harlan County, he thereafter is a marked man. He will be "got" in one way or another, even if it requires the lapse of a bit of time for the reading public to forget the sensational headlines that have now been running.

What is Senator La Follette and his committee going to do about setting up real justice in Harlan County whereby thugs and murderers will be put where they can commit crime no more, and where justice will surround the innocent with the mantle of protection? It is a very vital question, for Harlan County.

The Senate committee has received a lot of glory for exposing the conditions, but the job is far from done. What has the Senate committee in mind about finishing it? HAROLD YOUNGMAN.

Two Views On Pegler.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am shocked that The Post would allow such an article as Westbrook Pegler's attack on Gen. Pershing to appear in the paper. It was dastardly. He, the general, is old and sick and because he became irritable at the reporters in New York is no reason why he should be attacked like this.

I cannot forgive Mr. Pegler for such unwarranted criticism. I think he should be dismissed from such a decent paper as The Post. The Post has always stood for fairness. The general did all within his power in the World War. He had to be a disciplinarian. He commanded all of us. I was in the war and had three sons to give to my country. I should think Westbrook Pegler should be ashamed when he sees his column in print.

A MOTHER OF 1918.

Washington, May 3.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Again Mr. Pegler hits straight from the shoulder in regard to burlesque. Its strip-tease artists should be banished from the stage. It's unfortunate that Washington, the city of culture and art, has to tolerate strip-teasers.

In my opinion it is a civic duty of The Post to keep such type of entertainment out of the District of Columbia. Justice Holmes may have gone to the Gayety, but you can rest assured it was in the days of real burlesque and it is very doubtful if he went at those times. Also the fact a bishop patronized his place seems to me as stretching the truth.

WILLIAM NICHOLSON.

In The Garden Of France.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A royal romance is flowering again where, in bygone days, princes and kings basked beneath the eyes of commoner ladies fair, for did not Francis and Diana find in the Touraine a perfect setting for their famous amours?

This old and beautiful province, praised ages ago by Julius Caesar and in recent times by Henry James, has attracted to her rich soil two lovers par excellence. After their enforced separation, David and Wally could scarcely have chosen to become reunited in a lovelier place.

And if royal lovers of old were wont to select the Touraine, a long line of illustrious men have also found there a tempo of life conducive to the fruition of their labors: Ronsard in poetry, Rabelais and Balzac in letters, Pascal in metaphysics, Comte and Renan in philosophy, are only a few of the shining lights in the galaxy.

So, perhaps it was no mere accident that the Chateau de Conde, near Tours, called the world's best beloved lovers. Indeed, peace and quietude, the generosity of mother nature and the spirit of good living have combined to make of the Garden of France a veritable paradise on earth. FIDES.

Advice To Reformers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While self-appointed professional "reformers" and bluenoses are all hot and bothered about the "indecency" of epidermal exposure vulgarly known as the "strip-tease" in our burlesque houses, something more indecent—I am tempted to say almost amounting to indecent exposure—is being pulled off on the beautiful Mount Vernon drive along the western bank of the Potomac. I refer to the shameless, brazen, erection of countless chalets de necessite sticking up like sore thumbs within 10 feet of the public driveway dedicated to George Washington, for the forthcoming Boy Scout Jamboree.

It appears more worthy of our Sumnerized chauvinists to attack this desecration of beautiful Potomac Mount Vernon drive than to work themselves into a lather over a few chorus girls who have to support a widowed mother and a half dozen kid brothers and sisters by revelations that can be surpassed at almost any bathing beach. Also let these bluenoses and busybodies attack the smutty jokes that are often heard in some of the more "respectable" and higher priced houses. ARISTOTLE.

The Post Impressionist

The Square Peg.

Of all life's old creations, the "square peg in the round hole" is perhaps the most tragic. Overlooked in the social shuffle, one finds the misfit in all fields of endeavor, his life dominated by the job, his potentialities sterilized by frustration.

The most pathetic case of which I know was that of an acquaintance at work whom we called the Old Man. The name was due not so much to age as to an unearthly stillness of spirit. Day in and day out the old chap sat behind his ink-stained, splinter-edged desk, oblivious to the people around him, apathetically writing his assignments. His abstinence from office fellowship was quite inoffensive. Nobody minded; indeed nobody cared with the exception of myself. I was interested long before I knew him even to talk to; when he was to me the same enigma that he remained to the rest of his associates. At that time I knew he had a story which I felt bound to learn.

Yet, for a long period after I managed our first brief conversation, little insight was gained. For one thing, the Old Man responded to very few topics. He seldom referred to himself. He showed no concern for current events or sports. I did notice that he manifested a peculiar animation when the subject veered to music or painting; and that his few reticent words indicated a cultivated perception of the beautiful and a knowedge of art; but for a long while I learned no more.

* * *

One morning the Old Man did not appear at the office. On hearing that he was sick, I obtained his address from the personnel clerk and set out to visit him. My trip ended in a shabby suburb of old houses whose yards for the most part were unkempt and full of debris. His particular residence appeared at once more orderly and more abandoned. Somehow it gave the same impression of vacancy as its owner. No evidence was there of activity, of the living struggle that marks a place with bits of color, disarray and character. His wife, a birdpeck of a woman, received me with a gentle diffidence. As she led me up to the sickroom I observed that small oil paintings littered the walls.

In a quiet way the Old Man was pleased and vaguely surprised to see me. On my part I was moved to see how wan he looked. His thin body hardly raised the bulky, faded patch-quilt that covered him. His room might have been the cell of a monk, so few were the furnishings: three or four larger pieces, furniture that was massive, dark and heavy grained; a red rug, spot-worn and mellow lent the only accent of color.

What interested me more, however, were several palish pictures. Presently I asked him who the artist was. His eyes, light and transparent, brightened like bits of gray smoke shot suddenly with sparks. "They're mine," he said; some early work that I keep hidden here. Ask Marion to show you the better ones as you go." "How splendid!" I replied eagerly. "You never told me—" He shook his head. "They're not much. But—they might have been." And then the sparks in his eyes were gone and they were as dull as smoke at dusk.

* * *

In our slow chat afterward the Old Man's story was simply told. Painting had been the passion of his youth. With small means he had managed somehow to combat the poverty that the artist usually encounters. Marriage had contributed largely to his defeat; marriage which he had not bargained for, a love which he could not relinquish. Unestablished, his work a gamble that he could not ask his wife to share indefinitely, he was driven finally to seek the security of permanent employment; and came eventually to the Government service. For a while he struggled to serve two masters; then he succumbed. As he put it, "The muse in me went to sleep."

Later, I inspected the Old Man's pictures. One large piece in particular attracted me. It was called "Imagery." Beside a castle of sand a boy knelt gazing out upon a sea that was alive with all the chaotic associations that haunt a boy's brain when he plays by the ocean. History and fiction had poured their treasures upon the transparent waves. I was entranced by the profusion of romantic detail. And it was not confused, but a tapestry of image-provoking shadows: the magic of a child's mind.

However, the creations of the whole betrayed the uncertainty typical of the artist who has not "found himself;" and more pathetically, the frailty, the ephemeral quality of the man; a man who was not made for heartbreaking struggle but to convey as a delicate instrument his sensitive response to the loveliness of life, to express from a tranquil existence his vision of beauty. Poor devil, he had failed!

* * *

Not long after, the office celebrated the Old Man's retirement. They presented him with a handsome pen and pencil set; a gesture well meant but short-witted. He had had a pen or pencil in his hand since time began; at least our memory of him was so. The Old Man acted much as though the occasion was just another day. Toward the end of the short formality one peaceful tear glinted on his cheek. A tear for 30 futile years!

Taxing State Employes.

THE NEWS from Albany has it that the New York Legislature in its closing hours will pass a measure to impose the State income tax on a large group of State officers drawing from $2,500 to $28,500 a year.

These officers, including the Governor, have been considered exempt from both Federal and State income taxes, but Gov. Lehman recently discovered, to his surprise, that the State exemption was based on mere opinions by two attorneys general, whose own salaries were involved in their judgment, and not any decision by the Court of Appeals.

Incidentally, although no such question ever was put to the Court of Appeals, the interests of the judges themselves would have been involved if they had been asked to make a decision. The judges are included in the fortunate group of totally exempt constitutional officers.

Up to this time it has just been assumed that the pay for these jobs, including many political judgeships at from $18,000 to $22,500 a year, was excepted. That was merely a tradition, however, and the Governor on learning this recommended a specific measure to remove all doubt and impose the State tax.

• • • •

IF AND WHEN it is decided to collect the State income tax on these salaries, however, the question of arrears and penalties naturally will follow. It appeals that the so-called constitutional officers of the State government have been tax-dodgers for many years, and, even granting that they were honestly mistaken, the law is plain on the matter of arrears and penalties.

A citizen in private business or private employ who honestly neglects to return certain income is hit with a 6 per cent penalty immediately, and the rate rises briskly thereafter. If, after years of honest error, his mistake is discovered he receives no discount on account of his good intentions, and it is assumed, of course, that the same method will be used in dealing with the constitutional officers.

And even though the Legislature, in the press of business toward closing time, should forget to pass the law, that would hardly preclude the imposition of the tax. The present law is plain enough for the Governor's understanding, and the tax department could proceed on its own initiative to collect the money, including the arrears and penalties. By all means the arrears and penalties should be collected by way of proving that neither politics nor pull can deter the collectors in the conscientious performance of their duty.

Of course, the revenue which might be derived from this tax on these salaries, with the arrears and penalties, will be almost negligible in a State which spends more than a million dollars a day to exist. But the case is the first gain in the effort to make all public employes tax conscious. True, this small group and the rest of the 5,000,000 employed by the States, counties and cities will still be exempt from the Federal income tax, and the Federal employes will still be exempt from the State tax in States which have that tax.

• • • •

BUT THERE ARE two measures before Congress now, and a third is being prepared, which would extend the Federal tax to State, county and city employes, and this one, when passed, will draw retaliatory State laws imposing the State taxes on the Federal people. Not this year will all this be done, but eventually the millions will be given the full privilege of citizenship, including the right to pay taxes.

There is still some patriotic protest from the tax-exempt on the ground that if the Federal Government is permitted to tax State, county and city salaries the States will lose their independence. That alarm is late, however; considering that the States, counties and cities have been using Federal money to pay their expenses, and in a not very remote way have been paying their help with Federal cash.

In that respect they have been taxing, or, if not actually taxing, then preying upon the Federal Government to redeem their own mismanagement—the very evil which the tax exemption pretends to prevent. The Federal Government taxes the salaries of Federal employes, but at present is forbidden to tax the pay of other employes in the subdivisions who are drawing Federal money through the inferior units of the country.

Incidentally, Franklin D. Roosevelt, when he was Governor of New York, did not know anything about the tradition exempting the so-called constitutional officers. He paid his State tax, and this example might comfort the patriots when they are showering down their taxes, including, by all means, the arrears and penalties.

Stirring Details for the Press.

("The only information available to the press about this first reunion of the ex-King of England and his bride-to-be inside the chateau was the statement by Mr. Rogers, 'The Duke of Windsor met Mrs. Simpson, dressed in her favorite blue, inside the chateau.'"—News Item.)

There's nothing for the public—
No statement, boys, for you,
Except that Mrs. Simpson,
She wore a dress of blue.

The age's greatest romance?
Well, possibly it's true,
But all that I can say is
She wore a dress of blue.

How did the ex-King greet her?
You wish her actions, too?
Ah, how can I forget it? . . .
She wore her favorite blue!

A world is waiting spellbound
For details? . . . Just a few?
Well, tell it Mrs. Simpson
Was in a dress of blue.

Did Edward wildly kiss her?
If not, what did he do?
I think the matter's covered—
The lady was in blue.

Was Wally quite excited?
Please give the world a clew!
Ah, can I e'er forget it—
It was a lovely blue!

What were his words? you ask me;
And were they long or few?
I think he simply told her,
"I see you are in blue."

What was her salutation?
The world must know, you say? . . .
She wore a dress of blue, sirs,
Now that's enough today!

Neutrality and Reality

Observer Notes Transatlantic Emphasis Of New Neutrality Bill And Speculates On Its Application In A Pacific War.

B Livingston Hartley.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE LONG NEUTRALITY BATTLE is at last over, and the President is now armed with a law designed to keep the country out of war. Since this law is necessarily the result of compromise, its basic provisions are either condemned or extolled by different sections of American opinion.

Many eminent Americans condemn the whole legislative structure for its insistence upon treating aggressor and victim exactly alike in the event of war. They claim that this attitude is not only morally indefensible under modern conditions, but is also politically unwise; that it assures any would-be war maker in advance that the traffic light will always be green as far as America is concerned, and so reduces our national influence on behalf of peace and encourages war and aggression abroad.

Other leaders of public opinion insist that our new legislation eliminates many of the dangers to neutrality we faced during the World War. Restrictions on the export of arms to belligerants, on the shipment of contraband to them in American ships and on travel of Americans on belligerant vessels are designed to serve this purpose, as is the adoption of the "cash-and-carry" policy. It is claimed that if we had enacted these measures in 1914, instead of pursuing the dangerous attempt to coerce great powers engaged in war into respecting our "neutral rights" and "the freedom of the seas," British interference with American shipping would have been greatly reduced, and German destruction of American ships and citizens would have been averted.

In Theory Bill Seems Damaging And Beneficial.

IN THEORY, then, the neutrality bill seems both damaging and beneficial to the maintenance of our peaceful status. It can be regarded as an encouragement to foreign war makers, yet its provisions should reduce dangerous friction with belligerent sea powers after war has begun. But this whole theory that American neutrality can be protected by legislative provisions after the other great powers have become engaged in war may be devoid of reality. Many far-seeing Americans believe that our economic and financial ties and national interests in all parts of the world reduce it to a pipe-dream of myopic isolationists. It is pertinent, therefore, to examine this theory here from a new angle, that of geography.

Our neutrality legislation has obviously been designed to meet one particular type of outbreak, another general war in Europe. Its "cash-and-carry" provisions would enable the British empire and France in such an event to avail themselves of our economic resources through their maritime superemacy, and deny such resources to their enemies. Their purchases in our markets would be beneficial to our business, because they already take nearly one-half of our exports, but would also serve a wider national interest. These purchases would contribute directly to the success of the overseas democracies, whose aims and policies appear less opposed to our interests than those of Nazi Germany, and whose control of the eastern Atlantic is not regarded as a menace to America. They exercise such control today, and we are free to keep our battle-fleet on the Pacific.

Since the "cash and carry" policy would similarly provide Japan with economic aid in making war against China, and thereby prejudice and even endanger our national interests in the Far East and the Pacific, it is clear that our new neutrality policy is primarily concerned with our Atlantic problems. We have based it upon the lessons of 1917, designed it to meet an analogous situation, and relegated to an insignificant place our concern for embroilment in other areas.

World Is Round, Writer Reminds Nation.

LOOKING AT Europe alone, most of our people hope this law will suffice to keep us neutral in another transatlantic conflagration. But can we afford to look at Europe alone under present conditions, even in seeking to avoid participation in another European war? Is it wise to overlook the fact that the world is round?

The present alignment of transatlantic nations proclaims in convincing accents that a general European war would not be limited to the smaller western end of the continent of Eurasia. Such a war must include Germany and Russia. If it includes Russia, the natural Berlin-Tokyo tie-up against her indicated by the "anti-Comintern" pact must come into play. Only a heedless optimist could expect the Japanese army to rest in the role of a spectator while their 40-year rival for Far Eastern supremacy was fighting for its life in the west.

We must face the fact, therefore, that another general European war is exceedingly likely to extend to the Pacific. This happened in 1914 and did not, by itself, endanger American neutrality. But next time there would be a vital difference, the fact that Japan would be an enemy and not ally of the British and French empires.

The Japanese navy would have command of the Pacific and the Japanese empire would be free to swallow the extensive Pacific possessions of Britain and France. Expansive possibilities this time would not be limited to Kiaochow and a number of South Sea islands; they would include instead a vast and tempting field for empire building.

Japan Would Control Many European Holdings.

FRENCH INDO-CHINA, Hongkong, British Borneo and even parts of the Malay peninsula could not be defended against the power supremacy of Japan. The way would be opened for the fulfillment of the "divine mission" in China, and the creation there of bigger and better Manchukuos. The rich and populous Dutch East Indies would also become susceptible to conquest by a simple declaration of war against Holland. The result is not hard to visualize, unless Russia could triumph over Japan despite her war in Europe. Tokyo would dominate the entire coast of the western Pacific, and remove any doubt that might remain of the final fate of the Philippines.

Some Americans feel that we could not afford to allow all this to happen. They base their opinion on the fact that America will always be a Pacific power, and believe that the creation across this ocean of a political bloc so superior to the United States would inevitably endanger our future. But Congress and the public might refuse to look ahead, insisting instead on neutrality at any price, even a price of potential danger to their children. They might believe the Pacific to be so broad that, even in a steadily shrinking world, the Weltmacht urge on its other shore could never menace America.

It is pertinent to examine, therefore, how near Japan could push her empire to us in the above conditions. A glance at a map of the Pacific shows that British and French islands in the Fiji, Tonga, Society, Tuamotu and Marqueses groups stretch more than half way across the entire ocean. The last group is nearer than California is to Honolulu, and considerably nearer than Honolulu to Panama. Japanese bases here would flank our communications from Panama to Hawaii, and might even, in the years to come, allow the bigger bombers of the future to maintain a constant menace to the Panama Canal.

Positive Stand Would Be Necessary Against Japan.

IT MIGHT BE safe to sacrifice everything to neutrality toward Europe if war again inflames the Eastern Hemisphere, but we should have to take a more positive stand in the Pacific. We should have to place some limit on Japanese absorption of European dependencies on this ocean, unless we were prepared to sell our own future short. We might succeed by an ultimatum to Tokyo, backed by a concentration of our battlefleet far from the Atlantic area in which our neutrality policies were being tested. We might even find it necessary to enter the war ourselves in order to preserve our future Pacific security, and thereby become involved once more in war in Europe.

In any case we cannot afford to delude ourselves that Europe and the Atlantic are all we need worry about for the purpose of neutrality. We must remember that the world is round, that we face also upon the Pacific, and that the surest defense against involvement in war is not neutrality at home, but the maintenance of peace overseas.

Catalan Strife

By Barnet Nover

The Anarchists Rebel.

UP TO NOW there has been more smoke than fire in the reports emanating from Perpignan and other French cities along the Spanish border concerning the anarchist uprising in Catalonia.

Yet the evidence that is available tends to indicate that the situation facing the Barcelona government, while by no means desperate, is none the less serious. Apparently a large number of troops have had to be withdrawn from the Aragon front, where the Catalan and rebel armies have been deadlocked for months. Possibly in consequence of this reduction in loyalist fighting strength, the insurgents have taken to the offensive. Should they now make headway the safety of Catalonia would be imperiled. But the realization of this danger may serve to reunite all elements of the Catalan population behind the present regime.

• • • •

SINCE THE ATTEMPTED military coup d' etat of last July, Catalonia has not only been engaged in waging war on the rebels, it has also undergone a profound social revolution.

The government that was in power at the time Gen. Goded sought to make himself master of Barcelona, was made up almost exclusively of members of the Esquerra (Catalan Left Republican) party, one of the component elements of the Popular Front.

As was the case in Madrid, this moderate regime had the backing, but not the collaboration of more radical parties, such as the Socialists and Communists, neither element particularly strong in Catalonia. It did not have the support of the Anarcho-Syndicalists whose strength in that region is considerable.

And, as in Madrid, it was not so much the government as the people themselves who, rallying to the defense of the republic with arms supplied them by the authorities, put down the army uprising.

In actuality the civil war in Barcelona was over ten hours after it began. It took only a little while to liquidate the rebels elsewhere in Catalonia.

• • • •

AT FIRST, therefore, the government at Barcelona counted for little; the militia and the elements out of which a large part of this militia was recruited, i. e., Socialists, Communists, Anarcho-Syndicalists, Trotzkyists, etc., counted for a great deal.

As was true in Russia during 1917 there were parallel centers of power. But while in Russia these were only two in number, namely, the Provisional government and the Soviet, in Catalonia there was a multiplicity of self-assertive authorities. In addition to the regular government there were the party and labor organizations, such as the F. A. I. (the Federation of Anarchists), the U. G. T. (Socialist General Workers' Union), the C. N. T. (National Labor Federation—the Anarcho-Syndicalist trade union), the P. O. U. (the Trotzkyist organization), etc.

The confiscation of property that took place during the early months following the July uprising was the result of the unregulated and unconditioned activities of these radical organizations, not infrequently at cross purposes with one another.

By October, however, something like order emerged from this chaos. That month saw the hitherto hostile Socialist and Anarcho-Syndicalist organizations agreeing to work together for the achievement of a common program representing a compromise between their respective points of view.

This program called, among other things, for the expropriation of large industrial establishments and the municipalization of housing property, for the creation of a people's army and the nationalization of banking.

• • • •

AT ABOUT the same time steps were taken to bring all Popular Front parties and the Anarcho-Syndicalists into the Catalan cabinet and thus end the conflict between the regime and the extra-governmental authorities. Such a development had already taken place in Madrid with the establishment of the Caballero government.

The Catalan coalition government of last fall proved unworkable, although, in consequence of the shift to the left, three decrees carrying out the compromise program of the extreme left was put through.

By April the struggle between the Anarchists and the other parties supporting the regime had reached the point where the government found it impossible to carry on any longer.

It was at this point that President Luis Companys took over the premiership. Himself a liberal democrat, rather than an extreme radical, and a Catalan patriot above everything, his intervention had a salutary effect. The basic coalition of parties was continued. But more and more the government sought to make itself the source and center of all authority and with increasing success.

• • • •

IN SO FAR as it has succeeded in this respect real order has been restored in Catalonia. But by the same token the unreconstructed anarchists have found the situation little to their liking. Suspicious of all governments, they particularly dislike those commanding real power.

Apparently the showdown between the government and the anarchists, at least the more extreme faction of anarchists, came over the question of the possession of arms.

In July the people had been armed because the regular army could not be depended upon to protect the government. Recently Premier Companys, in the interests of public order, ordered all arms in the possession of individuals not actually with the police or in the national militia given up.

This move the anarchists resented. They denounced the edict as counter-revolutionary. Rather than submit many of them took to the warpath. The result has been a bloody struggle between them and the government whose final outcome is not yet clear.

The Great Poets

By William Lyon Phelps

Prof. Dinsmore's Book.

Here is a book that I regard as immensely interesting and important, both for the knowledge displayed in it and for the inspiration that every reader will receive from it. It is called "The Great Poets and the Meaning of Life" and is written by Prof. Charles Allen Dinsmore, one of the greatest living authorities on Dante. It is published by Houghton, Mifflin Co., Boston.

Just after the tremendous financial collapse of 1929 Mr. Christopher Morley called on President Hoover in the White House and asked him to answer this question, "What does America need more than anything else at this moment?" And President Hoover replied, "What America needs is a great poet."

• • • •

Ever since I was 18 years old I have believed that we can learn more truth and more important truth from the great poets than from any work of science or economics or politics. The great poets not only tell the truth about life and human nature, but they are the great interpreters. They are the true soothsayers; the only reliable clairvoyants.

The great poets lift us to a higher plane of thought and of emotion. After one has read any one of the great poets attentively one is never again the same man.

• • • •

Now Prof. Dinsmore, in this book, points out what the great poets tell us about the innermost meaning of life. He has confined himself only to the greatest poets but I wish he had included one more—Goethe, for although Goethe called himself a man of the world, he was also a spiritual teacher. The poets discussed in this brilliant book, in separate chapters, are Homer, Aeschylus, Lucretius, Virgil, Dante and Shakespeare. Then there are other chapters that discuss these questions: "In What Manner Do the Poets Help Us?" "The Meaning of Life in the Ancient Poets," "Religion as Poetry," and finally "What Is Common to All."

Dignifying The Plumber

Samuel Fassler, commissioner of buildings in Manhattan, wants to dignify the plumbing business. He believes that the men who straighten out the kinks in the pipes and faucets and drains and toilets are highly specialized technicians and that the word "plumber" does not do them justice. "It stands," he believes, "for a sorry-looking, dirty-faced individual carrying a tool bag."

So, as far as Mr. Fassler's influential department is concerned, all this is going to be changed forthwith. The plumber is to be the "sanitary engineer." Whatever the reaction of the individual plumber will be—and we suspect he loses no time worrying about what he is called, provided he gets his share of business—we have no doubt as to the public's reaction to the change. A plumber will remain a plumber.

New Jersey Relief

Trenton Correspondent Summarizes Dilemma Of State Which Lacks Campbell Inheritance Tax To Finance Support Of Needy This Year.

By Eugene Pharo.

Special Correspondence to The Post.

Trenton.

A FEW DAYS AGO New Jersey's legislature, over Gov. Hoffman's veto, voted to feed the hungry chiefly with money collected to maintain and build its highways. The decision, and the maneuvering that preceded it, did much to reveal the confusion in nearly everyone's mind over the question of relief, and the degree to which merely political dickering is being relied upon to settle questions of whose profundity few seem to be really aware. No conflict could have made the situation more dramatically apparent than that in New Jersey, for it resolved itself in the popular mind into a choice between paving and people, or between concrete and citizens.

in the struggle, as the question whether the "concrete lobby" would have its way at the expense of human suffering—as disingenuous a statement as are most political slogans, and by the other side by various expressions of the fact that the State's prosperity depends to an unusual degree on the perfection of its highways. There was, to vitiate this pretendedly clear-cut issue, a contest between those who believe in a sales tax for financing relief, and those who are organized in opposition to a sales tax for this or any other purpose, but this division was scarcely mentioned.

Also on the tax side there was the determination of most of the State's 563 municipalities to avoid what they considered to be necessary and outrageous increases in their tax rates for the purpose of relief, by dipping into the State's monies instead. But in none of the discussion was there any serious consideration of whether there is any other way to handle local relief needs than by dipping into public funds, either municipal or State. Such a question would merely have mystified the voters and political adherents of those in whose hands the decision lay and would have resulted in such a series of heavy headaches as to have made any practical politician who discussed it a fit subject for a State lunacy commission—of which New Jersey self-consciously has none.

President Of University Discusses Problem Candidly.

THE NEAREST that anyone has come to discussing publicly a logical way of approaching the question of relief was illustrated the other night at a conference of social workers in Burlington County—a large rural district in south Jersey—at which Dr. Frank Kingdon, president of the University of Newark, called attention to the archaic procedure and entirely political color of current efforts. But even he seemed totally unaware that there might be some other way of looking at the question than on the bland assumption that it is up to the State to arrange everything.

After calling attention to the fact that New Jersey was rescued from its relief quandary in 1936 by the purely fortuitous payment of an inheritance tax of nearly $17,000,000 on the estate of the late Dr. John T. Dorrance, who was president of the Campbell Soup Co., of Camden, and that some had looked hopefully, but in vain, for a similar large payment to accrue from the estate of the late Arthur Brisbane in 1937, Dr. Kingdon declaimed heatedly against such reliance on chance, and the consequent failure of the State government to face the real issue.

"Some time ago these payments were being discussed at the shore," he said, "and the question was raised whether they were to be regarded as visitations of God, or as accidents. I told them they were both, because any visitation of God to New Jersey would be an accident."

The Newark educator and social worker, after the laughter had subsided, pointed out that relief in New Jersey has been operated up to the present almost exactly on the basis of the Elizabethan poor laws and reported with some heat that in several towns the local authorities require the needy to sign a "pauper's oath" before they are given aid. His own point of view emerged eventually as in favor of a State-organized scheme of relief, on the basis of county units, with autonomy for the larger civic committees, such as Newark, and with the whole system to be conducted according to uniform and intelligent standards, and administered by trained personnel. Major decisions, he said, should be made by State officials on a technical basis.

County Unit Proposal Indorsed By Social Workers.

THE OPENING such a plan would make for the activities of social workers, through the tenure in State-supported agencies, made his proposal quite attractive to his audience, but led to no real discussion. It represented, nevertheless, the only governmental procedure that has not as yet been tried in the State; as well as the only one that is not likely to be tried for some time to come. The last prediction is on the basis of an evenly divided State Senate, in which the division of forces in the State is adequately represented, and which is almost certain to bring to a stalemate any scheme that cannot be made a matter of political bargaining.

Last year when New Jersey, on April 15, threw the whole problem of relief back to the municipalities, there were numerous stories current of deaths by starvation. The handling of one of these stories by publications on either side of the political fence illustrates the division of sentiment on the subject. In Burnington County an infant died. The family to which it had belonged lived in a rural district. There were several children, and the father was rated by the local Republicans as shiftless, and by the local New Dealers (of which there was a handful not on relief) as unfortunate and underprivileged. He was, of course, on local poor relief.

As reported in the Republican press the statement of medical men that death of the infant was due to "malnutrition" was made much of. Malnutrition, it was pointed out, means wrong diet, and could be traced to ignorance and carelessness. The New Deal papers, on the other hand, maintained that malnutrition means nothing less than starvation, and it labeled the whole State situation that it held responsible for this incident, and others like it, as a "guinea pig experiment" with human beings.

A State sales tax that would produce funds for relief was at the same time opposed by the latter faction, and still is; hence the final enactment, on April 27 of this year, over the 24-page printed veto of that old Sales-Taxer Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, of what a number of farmers, automotive trade interests, shore resort investors and "reactionaries," call a legal larceny of motor highway funds in order to prevent either "malnutrition" or "starvation" among the needy, while, apparently, leaving the general tax set-up untouched.

State Relief Director Asks $1,500,000 Increase.

NO SOONER was the bill passed, however, than Arthur Mudd, director of the State Financial Assistance Commission (which last year superseded the Emergency Relief Administration as the State's relief disbursing agency) declared that the portion of the $12,667,660 total for this year's relief that would have to be raised by municipalities, would have to be increased by $1,500,000. The rate of relief payments for the first quarter of the year, he reported, had indicated a total need for the year of at least $15,000,000. According to the terms of the highway diversion act, the municipalities are to raise $3,000,000 (which Mudd would increase to $4,500,000), while $7,917,660 is to come from the road funds, and various funds at the command of the Legislature are counted upon to complete the sum.

Aside from the broad question of the source of monies to be used for public relief, the point about expert personnel that was brought out the other night by Dr. Kingdon, tends to impress quite a number of ordinary citizens, whether they are on relief or not. For the political expedients that have been resorted to to provide funds have had full sway also in determining who shall administer them.

Here the acuteness of those who see in any kind of political pork barrel an opportunity to mend their own fortunes, has resulted in the appointment through political influence of a lot of ladies who have seen better days, as relief visitors and counselors. It has resulted, too, in the employment of a lot of men whose businesses have not been doing so well since the depression, to perform work in which they have had no experience, and of which they have little knowledge. Among these tasks is the administration of relief, with the result that along with a lot of waste and political favoritism, goes a great deal of continuous suffering and degradation among those who really deserve attention of some sort.

It is difficult to imagine that the same money, collected by private agencies and privately administered, would not in the end achieve far better results, and at far less cost of State domination and corruption.

Sen. Wheeler's Advice Checks G. M. Rail Deal

Motors Official, Counsel Heeded Warning of Van Sweringen Inquiry.

By Sidney Olson.

Donaldson Brown, vice president of General Motors Corporation, and John Thomas Smith, corporation counsel, withdrew from a plan to purchase control of the gigantic Van Sweringen rail empire last month after they were warned by Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, that the deal would be investigated, according to evidence introduced yesterday at a Senate hearing.

"They had no desire to stand the gaff of a Washington investigation," was the assertion made in a memorandum written by B. D. Lang, of the law firm of Proskauer, Rose and Paskus, who represented Young & Kolbe Co., the New York brokers who finally bought the great industrial holdings from the George and Francis Ball Foundation.

Reported Phone Talk.

Lang was reporting for the office file a note on a telephone conversation between Judge Proskauer and Smith, of General Motors, after Smith had returned to New York from Washington. He noted:

"Mr. Smith told the judge that there was strong objection in Washington running not only to the deal but also to the persons involved; that a full investigation would be had as to the deal and the personnel and that he, Smith, was definitely through and that he would undertake to say for Mr. Brown that Mr. Brown was also through. They had no desire to stand the gaff of a Washington investigation."

Frank F. Kolbe, former economics professor and now one of the trio of Robert Young, his partner, and Allan P. Kirby, Wilkes-Barre millionaire, that control the vast Van Sweringen interests, was on the stand when Wheeler read the memo.

Kolbe assured the committee the reluctance of Smith and Brown to be investigated related only to the General Motors Corporation. He said: "They didn't mind being investigated personally, but they didn't want to bring General Motors records into it."

Young, in an impromptu speech before the sub-committee, summed up his repeated protestations that "a great amount of power, like this, is a bad thing," by stating:

"I hope in a few years to reduce the whole Midamerica Corporation setup to a reasonable organization.

"I hope I don't go into my grave owning Alleghany Corporation stock because I don't think it would be a good investment to leave my wife and daughter. I want to end up in a few years owning a small percentage of C. & O. stock. I want to retire from the active field as a gentleman of leisure."

"You're not 75 years old yet. What's the idea?" barked Wheeler, smilingly, in reference to his own opposition to the President's court reorganization bill.

Recapitalization Plan.

During the testimony Wheeler also introduced in the record a proposed plan of recapitalization of Alleghany Corporation—a plan still being considered—under which Chesapeake Corporation would be eliminated; preferred stock would be exchanged in common stock; dividends in arrears eliminated; common stock exchanged into new lower value common, and the principal amount of 5 per cent 1950 bonds reduced.

This was to result in a complete simplification of the structure of Alleghany Corporation, with surplus holding companies eliminated and stockholders given stock more accurately reflecting the "true present position" of the holdings.

The hearings on this phase of the purchase by Young, Kolbe and Kirby of the Ball holdings will be concluded on Monday.

Educators Hear Editor Assail 'Flag-Waving'

Academic Freedom Vital, He Claims; Deplores Anti-Red 'Hysteria.'

Academic freedom is the most important of all liberties, surpassing even freedom of speech and press, a San Francisco editor last night told the American Council on Education.

Addressing the twentieth annual meeting at the Hotel Mayflower, Chester H. Rowell, editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, cited Hitler's "poisoning of the wells of knowledge" as the crowning example of the vital need of free teaching and learning.

"The supreme importance of academic freedom is not its protection of a personal right of the professor but is the fact that it is the very core of the right of society to progress," he said.

He deplored the current wave of "anti-Communist hysteria" led by those who would "regiment our school children into flag-waving jingoes and reactionary anti-unionists."

The failure of curricula in American schools to keep pace with changing conditions was criticized by Raymond A. Kent, president of the University of Louisville. The system has been unable even to handle successfully the problem of inter-collegiate athletics and it has allowed social fraternities "to become so influential as to divert the main purposes and change the essential educational character of the institution."

Hs urged educators to adopt the empirical method of the physician: make a diagnosis, prescribe treatment, and then, if the patient is not relieved, check on his diagnosis and use a different treatment.

Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, presided at the night session.

The perplexing problem presented by overcrowded colleges and professional schools and thousands of jobless graduates was discussed at the afternoon session.

Malin Craig, Chief of Staff and Acting Secretary of War in Secretary Woodring's absence.

The Mackay Trophy will be given to nine Air Corps officers and enlisted men for a flight from Langley Field, Va., to Allegan, Mich., last August during heavy fog, thunderstorms and heavy overcast. The trophy was established in 1912, and is associated with outstanding flights made by the Army Air Corps. The nine men sharing in the award will have their names engraved on the trophy, and each will receive a gold medal from the donor.

The Army officers and men who will share in the award are Capt. Richard E. Nugent, Air Corps; First Lieut. Joseph A. Miller, Air Corps; Second Lieut. William P. Livin' a good straight life has two advantages. First, it gives you a clear conscience, and then it's mighty handy to be able to point at your clean record in case the question ever comes up. Out here in Hollywood where there are so many rich homes, the servant problem has become pretty risky on account of a lot'ta crooks have been known to forge their letters of recommendation jest to get in.

When my Cousin Perdy was out here not long ago, she took a job in one of them big homes as a cook. One day she was out workin' in the garden and she come in and started to set the table without washin' her hands. The lady of the house says "Perdy, do you know you're leavin' your fingerprints all over them plates?" and Perdy says "Oh don't worry about them fingerprints — I ain't got nothin' to hide!"

Thirty-five or more Farm Credit Club members and their friends reported an enjoyable walk last Sunday to Old Rag Mountain . . . Wildflowers were everywhere and the weather was admirable . . . One of the hikers wore a pedometer and it ticked off exactly 7.3 miles . . . The committee has arranged for a hike to the Bull Run Mountains, approximately 40 miles from Washington, for May 16 . . . This, for the most part, will be a woodland walk, but one that affords some delightful views of the Blue Ridge Mountains . . . Nice letters continue to come to the Office of Education which sponsors the Smithsonian Institution's weekly broadcast, "The World Is Yours" . . . From right here at home, Washington, someone has written the office: "Your radio program has been such an inspiration to one lying in bed in a hospital for 20 months and who must of necessity read very little" . . . And from California: "'The World Is Yours' is a splendid beginning of a continent-wide educational campaign . . ."

Procedure

Standardized procedure in the stenographic section is discussed at some length in the current issue of the F. C. A. Employes Bulletin and brings up some points of interest to officials and employes, alike:

"The stenographic section serves virtually all offices of the Farm Credit Administration. Manifestly, if the section is to render this service efficiently and economically a reasonably standardized procedure must be followed. This procedure is stated in the stenographic manual which serves as a guide for the work of the stenographic section.

"The procedure described in the manual was adopted after careful study by the planning section and, as a matter of sound organization, is binding upon the stenographic, except as amended by proper authority.

"It is recognized that there may be an occasional instance where the conditions of work in an operating office are such as to warrant a departure from the standardized procedure now in effect. A good example of such variation is found in the recent request of one office that the 'set-up' of its material should be somewhat different from that provided for in the manual. Upon investigation it was found that there was, in this office, a genuine need to have certain material arranged in a particular manner, and that such arrangement would not entail an undue burden upon the stenographic section. Accordingly, the manual has been amended as regards this particular office to meet this situation.

"Any request for a departure from the procedure outlined in the stenographic manual should be embodied in a memorandum to the office of the chief clerk; should state definitely the procedure that it is desired to substitute for the standardized procedure, and should state the reason for such such change."

Unto her I command that ye shall do homage when she shall be this day crowned Queen Shenandoah XIV, your lawful leige lady to rule and to reign over the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival from this day forward, oh, ye people of this fair land who are here gathered, are ye willing to do the same?"

From beyond the 40-yard line and to the white steps the people acclaimed the queen.

Advancing a few steps, the minister inquired: "Are you, Gretchen, willing to take the solemn oath that pledges you in loyalty, justice and sincerity to this people?"

"I am willing," said Gretchen.

"Do you solemnly promise before God and these people to govern your domain with prudence and rule according to its laws and established customs?"

"I do," said Gretchen.

Other Solemn Obligations.

There were other solemn obligations before the crown, a glittering one that had a red lining and some sparkling jewels, was placed on the blonde hair by Capt. J. R. Beardall, Secretary Swanson's aide. Then Dr. C. R. Anderson, the mayor, handed over the key to the city, but the words were said by the minister of the crown: "Receive this key to the City of Winchester, Va. It is the key to our city and our hearts, welcoming you to our homes and institutions."

The queen was receiving things as fast as a child on Christmas morning and now came the golden apple. "Receive this golden apple and remember to pray for God's blessing upon the trees, that we may gather in the harvest of apples and ever rejoice in his goodness." The queen handed the apple to one of her maids.

Trumpets sounded shrill, careening notes like the horns of Camelot and the queen arose, then the visiting ladies said: "Isn't her gown lovely, that creamy stuff brocaded in gold, and the gold lace collar and the sweeping robe of velvet trimmed in ermine?" She was, from a slight distance, a tall pale figure that seemed wistful in its reign over a transient kingdom, wide-bordered by misty hills.

Prayer for Queen.

A voice went over her: "O God, giver of the bounties of nature; of the blossoms of spring and the fruits of the trees, who crownest thy faithful servants with mercy and loving kindness. Look with favor upon thy servant who is crowned queen, that she may receive the richest of heavenly grace and the crown of everlasting life."

One thousand children of the Handley High School trooped from the esplande to depict, in pageantry, "When Beauty Came." In the dancing, the pantomime, the darkness of prehistoric earth dissovled as the columns, increasingly bright, bellowed and surged up the white steps that the sun was shining on. In a hallelujah finish, the darkness and oppression fled and the light, tripping swash of the bright costumes faded off into the pale May afternoon.

Now all of this pageantry that grasped the spring's surge of life across the apple country was out on the edge of town. Downtown you can't see the full-breasted countryside with its apple trees and the sheep chewing lazily at the buttercups and green grass of the rolling hillsides.

Carnival Spirit Rules.

Right now in the street you can hear the whoopla of the carnival. Men out there have tiny cameras and they take your picture for 20 cents; other men with incredibly shrill voices have walking canes for sale and all sorts of toy gadgets. Small boys walk the streets with pasteboard signs describing current theater attractions. Rural visitors, with well-shaven necks and big cigars in their mouths, stand around laughing and buying souvenirs. City slickers with sporty haircuts and spats seem to be looking for something.

In the middle of the street a piano is perched and a colored man who laughs from his waist to his eyebrows plays of a long lost and good gal and the blues of the sweaty Gulf coast. A man with a hand organ grinds endlessly on the same tune: "Let's All Sing Like the Birdies Sing."

In the more sedate hotel lobbies, the girls and boys have begun to congregate. They talk of the functions of tomorrow, the reception of the princesses by the queen, of the quiet and nice little parties the visiting girls will receive in Winchester homes and, of course, how pretty the queen looked last night when she came in behind her police escort from the home of her grandmother, Mrs. A. Pembroke Thomson, of Hawthorn, Jefferson County, W. Va.

The harassed officials of the Apple Blossom Festival, expecting 100,000 people here tomorrow, were preparing for the big day, which includes the grand feature parade. The horns and big bass drums of 35 bands are being primed right now to blare tomorrow for a 4-mile-long march. The floats, which will be full of apple blossoms and the valley's pretty girls, are being gassed and oiled up behind the sheds somewhere. The march starts off at 2 o'clock, will wind through most of the principal streets with a thunder and blare that is expected by some cynical visitors to bring from the hotel rooms some of the apple blossom spectators who, according to reports, have not emerged from their rooms since coming here.

Queen Shenandoah XIV Crowned in Colorful Ceremony

Post Staff—Del Vecchio.

Women's First Campus Home Is Dedicated

Mrs. H. A. Strong, Donor, Attends George Washington U. Ceremony.

The first campus home for women which George Washington University has had in the 116 years of its history was dedicated yesterday.

Principal figure at the ceremonies was Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong, philanthropist and benefactor of education, who gave the dormitory—known as the Hattie Strong Residence Hall—to the university.

Mrs. Strong pulled the cord, which removed the cover from the tablet placed on the north wall of the hall, which bears the inscription:

"Erected by a woman's altruism and understanding. Dedicated to the growth of the human spirit that God and the State may be served by noble women."

A large group of university people and distinguished guests assembled on the grounds of the hall.

President Cloyd Heck Marvin accepted the gift on behalf of the trustees.

"Mrs. Strong," said he, "has been the inspiration of the hall from its very beginning.

"I have never known a person of such universal interest in works for good, or with a heart more quick to human sympathy."

Recalling Mrs. Strong's many gifts to Rochester, N. Y., and Washington, Mrs. Harper Sibley, for 30 years a friend of Mrs. Strong, gave the dedicatory address, praising her "great spirit of unselfish giving and co-operation with great causes."

In response, Mrs. Strong, who is a trustee of the university, said:

"For that reason," she concluded, "I am willing to be present at this trying occasion."

4 Stage 'Sit-Down' In Allen's Office; Make Relief Plea

For one hour yesterday afternoon, three colored women and a white man, delegated by the Worker's Alliance, "sat down" in Commissioner George E. Allen's office in the District Building.

They complained "strike-breaking tactics" were being used by the Board of Public Welfare at the Pennsylvania avenue branch of the Public Assistance Division. (There, for the last three days, 35 men and women have been "sitting in" in protest against slashed relief checks.)

"The so-called strikers are now demanding that toilet rooms in the Public Assistance Division office, 2529 Pennsylvania avenue, be kept open for them at night. There are no toilet rooms attached to the waiting room. The only available toilet rooms are in the rear of the building which must be kept locked because of valuable records and equipment."

Parade Will Start Circus For School Children Today

The three-ring circus, anticipated for weeks by thousands of Washington children, will finally take place this afternoon, 2:20 p. m. in Central High School stadium. Presented by the Community Center Department of the District Public Schools, the circus, an annual Washington event, will be divided into four parts.

The first part, a parade into the stadium, will be led by the American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps, the Metropolitan Police Boys Band, the Washington Ellas Boys Band and the Park View Boy Scouts Drum and Bugle Corps.

The second part, which will begin at 2:45 p. m., is the circus proper. It will include boxing, acrobatics, cannibals, wild animals acts, clowns, pirates and eccentric folk, rural, ballet and Maypole dancing.

The third part will be a "Gypsy Wedding Festival," directed by Mary Woodward Davis. Its cast has been drawn from the Southeast Boys Club, Eliot Junior High, the Boys and Girls Southeast Drama Group, the Children's Community Chorus, Columbia Heights Girls Club and the Langdon, Woodridge and German Orphanage.

The fourth part will be a patriotic finale. The "Star-Spangled Banner" will be sung to music played by the Metropolitan Boys Club Band. The District's Boy and Girl Scouts will also take part.

Announcer and chief "barker" for the circus will be Gordon Hittenmark. The Eleventh and Thirteenth street stadium entrances are to be used by the public.

S. E. Merchants Oppose Plant King Informed

Construction of a slaughter house in Bennings road, as proposed by Adolf Gobel, Inc., might kill plans for a municipal stadium at the foot of East Capitol street, the Southeast Business Men's Association yesterday informed Chairman William H. King, of the Senate District Committee.

Reminding King that the association voted last February against erection of the plant, Secretary Louis F. Frick urged Congressional enactment of legislation to control "nuisance industries" here.

Public hearings will be held at 2 p. m. Tuesday on the regulatory measure introduced by King which, it is believed, would prevent operation of the Gobel plant and keep allied industries out of the Capital.

"For a number of years," Frick told King in behalf of the association, "this section of the city has been compelled to endure the garbage disposal plant of the District with its obnoxious odors and it is hoped that it will not be compelled to suffer additional obnoxious odors from the proposed slaughter house.

"Operation of the slaughter house in the vicinity of Benning road will be obnoxious to the citizens of the Southeast, a hazard to the health of the community and prejudicial to the enjoyment of the park and recreational areas of this section of the city."

Dr. Hart to Speak.

Dr. Hornell Hart, professor of social ethics at Hartford Theological Seminary, will be the guest speaker at the Friends Meeting House today at 8:30 p. m. His subject will be "The Meaning of Meditation."

Sub-committee Bill Will Cover D.C. Tax Deficit

Sufficient new taxes will be recommended by the House subcommittee on District revenue to offset any deficit in the 1938 supply bill, whether it be $6,000,000 or $8,000,000, Chairman Kennedy stated yesterday.

Kennedy said the subcommittee wants to avoid an increase in the real estate tax and will draft a tax program that will balance the budget without it.

The subcommittee will meet Tuesday in executive session with the Commissioners to draft an omnibus tax bill.

After this measure is drafted, hearings will be resumed.

Kennedy said he already had received a number of protests against the corporation tax plan proposed by the Commissioners.

Commissioner Hazen told the subcommittee a 1 per cent levy on gross business would yield approximately $6,000,000.

As the personal property tax would be waived for these corporations, the net return would be only about $4,200,000.

Ebert declared he previously had been released on a habeas corpus writ in the case. Commissioner Cotter set bail at $100 pending a hearing May 20.

Early Recess To Cost D. C. Day in House

The District will lose another District day in the House Monday due to the unexpected week-end adjournment of the House early Thursday.

While four bills have been approved by the House District Committee, reports were not filed by the committee clerk before the House took its early recess. Consequently, no local bills are on the House calendar.

The measures which are delayed as a result are proposals to raise the legal marriage age by two years, to relieve Congress of the task of passing upon healing art license applications, and to regulate beauty and barber shops.

Public hearings were scheduled for next Thusday morning by Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, yesterday on several bills to amend the District liquor act.

At the same time Palmisano will question members of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board on their policy of penalizing retail dealers who don't pay bills to wholesalers on time.

While the regulation has been upheld by the court as in keeping with the law, Palmisano believes that the board is too strict in minor violations.

Other bills which will be considered by the sub-committee include two proposals by Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, to relax provisions of the present act. One would permit the sale of liquor by the drink until 2 a. m., instead of midnight, on Saturday nights. The other would allow lunch-counter bars to dispense liquor as well as beer and wine.

Palmisano is author of a bill to make the United States District Court, instead of the commissioners, the appellate agency in appeals from decisions of the ABC board.

Two measures have been submitted by the Commissioners. One would prohibit the sale or transfer of licenses, while the other world raise the fees for solicitors representing out-of-town manufacturers and wholesalers.

Vandals Damage Clothing in Two D. C. Dress Shops

Police were seeking persons last night believed to have entered two dress shops in Anacostia early yesterday and damaged more than $500 worth of women's wearing apparel.

Within ten hours vandals entered the Lee Dress Shop, 1918 Nichols avenue, and a shop at 1227 Good Hope road and with a sharp instrument cut garments in both establishments to shreds, police said.

Robert D. Cogan, owner of the Lee shop, valued his damage at $500, while the owners of the second shop said seven dresses had been damaged.

Pageant Presented By Colored Masons

Depicting the birth, growth and progress of Freemasonry, of the Prince Hall affiliation, a historical fraternal pageant, "Sons of Light," in four episodes, by Past Matron Edna Y. French, was presented last night in the auditorium of Metropolitan African Methodist Episcopal Church by the Acacia Grand Lodge of Colored Masons.

Pageantry set forth a procession of spirits to the Temple of King Solomon, on Mount Moriah, including the heads of the adoptive rites, crusaders, Heroines of Jericho, and an ensemble of light, in which was represented the sun, stars and temple beauties and rose maidens.

Mother's Day Program Set For District

Capital Groups to Join in National Observance of Occasion.

Special Church Services Are Planned; Statue to Be Unveiled.

Mother's Day—that Sunday of each year devoted to mothers living and dead—will be observed by Washington and the Nation tomorrow.

Along with the usual Mother's Day sermons in the city's churches, and the traditional wearing of red carnations for living mothers and white ones for mothers deceased, numerous special ceremonies have been planned in the Capital.

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, will unveil and bless a statue dedicated to "Mary, Mother of Mankind" after a St. Mary's Day mass at 9 a. m. today in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University.

Mass at High Altar.

The mass will be celebrated at the high altar in the crypt by the Right Rev. David T. O'Dwyer, director of the Shrine. Archbishop Curley will be present and will be in the procession from the crypt to the nave, where the unveiling will take place at 10 a. m.

The Right Rev. John L. Belford, of Brooklyn, will deliver the sermon and the Rev. Edward G. Roelker will be master of ceremonies.

The statue, 6 feet in height, is made of white Vermont marble. On the work, the sculptor, Harry Eversfield Donohue, of New York, spent two years, using his wife as his model. Mrs. Donohue will be present at this morning's ceremonies, as will be the sculptor.

Also attending the rites will be Justice Philip A. Brennan, of the Supreme Court of New York, and Mrs. Brennan, who gave the statue to the Shrine.

Mrs. Brennan, who is president of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, is originator of the movement to make the day preceding Mother's Day universally observed as "Mary's Day." The month of May has long been dedicated in the calendar of the Roman Catholic Church to the Blessed Virgin.

The inscription designating the Mother of God as "Mary, Mother of Mankind," is being used on a statue for the first time, university officials said yesterday. The Shrine has been selected as the site for the statue because of its national significance to Catholics of the United States.

War Mothers Services.

The American War Mothers will hold services at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, in Arlington, tomorrow at 2 p. m.

National president of the group, Mrs. Howard C. Boone, will preside, and more than 50 patriotic organizations are expected to join in the services.

Maj. Edwin S. Bettleheim, jr., will be in charge of the massing of the colors. The Marine Band, under the direction of Capt. Taylor Branson, will give a half hour's concert.

The Policemen's and Firemen's Catholic Society will hold its annual Mother's Day Mass at St. Patrick's Church at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Its 700 members will assemble in Knights of Columbus Hall at 7:30 and march to the church, led by the Police Boys Club Band.

Will March to Willard.

Celebrant of the mass will be the Right Rev. John McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Baltimore. After the services, the group will march to the Willard Hotel for breakfast. Senators, Representatives, judges of District courts and police and fire officials will attend.

Tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock the Y. M. C. A. will hold its annual Mother's Day breakfast for the benefit of young men living in the dormitory, who are unable to be home.

Mrs. A. A. Stockdale, wife of the former pastor of the Congregational Church, will deliver an address. The affair is in charge of the dormitory council and F. K. McTyler, the dormitory secretary.

Mother's Day will be observed at the Salvation Army Men's Social Service Institution at 11 a. m.

At this time, Adjutant A. E. Baldwin will deliver a sermon on "My Mother."

Today's Sermon

The more intense one's life, the stronger the temptation to burn it out quickly. The more light and power one possesses, the stronger thereby are one's temptations. The higher the ideals the keener the conscience, the finer the soul, the greater the temptations. "It takes a big country to have a big war. You cannot have a storm in a tea kettle or a whirlwind in a coffee pot." Much light demands much control. High candle power and speed are expensive.

The more brilliant one's life the greater the temptations. This suggests the problem of attractive personalities. Such folk make the dilettantists and the mental snobs. Friends are made easily and often lost easily. In such lives are the issues of temperament, fickleness and shallowness. It is hard to see the stars on Broadway. A vacancy existed in a college faculty. The trustees were considering applicants and listening to testimonials, one of which read, "He is a genius." An old trustee is reported to have moved that he be not elected and gave as his reason for opposition, "we have enough geniuses on our faculty now." Brilliancy and ability are not synonymous. Some very cheap stones shine the highest. A great Frenchman must have sensed this when he hastened to say, "the only genius I know is that of hard work." Jesus was not an infant prodigy or adult genius. His childhood was normal with the growing and silent years. As a man, he did not dazzle or scintillate, but he shone. He did not attract men because of sheer brilliance but because of inner radiance. A brilliant man is tempted to please people instead of leading them, to entertain them instead of enriching them, to bask in the sunlight of his own personality rather than to trim the wick and to guard the light which would give his face meaning and his life power when the years have wrinkled his smiles.

Bible Lecturer To Open Series In D. C. Church

Dr. F. C. Morgan to Begin Talks Tomorrow at Central.

Dr. F. Crossley Morgan, noted Presbyterian Bible teacher and lecturer, will begin a week's Bible conference program at Central Presbyterian Church tomorrow.

Beginning with the Sunday services the visiting clergyman will speak twice each day on the Bible.

Dr. Morgan is the son of Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, the noted pastor of Westminster Chapel, Buckingham Gate in London, who has been a lecturer at many conferences in America.

Like his father, Dr. Morgan has lectured on the Bible throughout America. He served in France, Belgium and Germany during the World War, and was decorated by King George V of England, with the military cross for "gallantry in action." He came to the United States in 1919, and has held pastorates in Albion, Ind., and Augusta, Ga., where he was in charge of the First Presbyterian Church, the historic Southern Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Morgan gave up his pastorate in order to give full time to Bible teaching and lecturing.

At 11 a. m. services his subject will be "Life—A Pageant of Triumph in Christ." At 8 p. m. he will discuss the theme "God's Picture of a Mother."

Christian Science Subject Is Adam

"Adam and Fallen Man" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The golden text is from I Corinthians 15:49: "As we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly."

Among citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." (Romans 8:2.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "It is only by acknowledging the supremacy of Spirit, which annuls the claims of matter, that mortals can lay off mortality and find the indissoluble spiritual link which establishes man forever in the divine likeness, inseparable from his Creator."

Dr. Powell to Give His First Sermon As Cathedral Dean

The Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, D. D., who was installed as Dean of Washington Cathedral last Thursday afternoon, will deliver his first sermon from the Cathedral pulpit at the celebration of the Holy Communion at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Practical Joker Proposes in Fun; Discovers He Means It; Girl Laughs at Him; He Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You gave such sound and sympathetic advice to a midshipman classmate of mine that I should like to place my problem before you. To begin with, I am a mischievous sort of fellow whose pranks make people believe I am never serious. A short time ago, another midshipman was escorting a young lady to one of our "hops" and I thought it would be fun to propose to her, which I did—only to discover that I was more serious about it than I had expected to be. The girl takes it as a joke and is going to hold the proposal over her parents' heads to induce them to give her an automobile. How can I convince the girl I am serious? Sincerely,

• • • •

DEAR B. N. B.: Hoist with your own petard, so to speak. Which is why you are taking the situation so seriously. I very much doubt that you are really in love with the young lady at this writing, but you dimly sense that she must be made to take you seriously if you are ever to feel your own man again. However, if she keeps you quakingly on the defensive long enough, you may develop that psychic fixation on her which amounts to love.

• • • •

I suppose the only way to convince her you are serious—since you feel that way about it—is to abandon your practical-joking ways from now on, and pay her a deadly-earnest brand of court. Tell her the truth, for one thing. Tell her you proposed as a joke, you regret to say; and now, to your even greater regret—since she's seen fit to mock your proposal—that you find yourself madly in love with her. Tell her she's slain the practical joker you were, and caused a sadder and wiser man to be born. Tell her since she's responsible for the creation of this better man, she's got to take him seriously; that it's her moral duty to do so.

• • • •

However much she might like to, no smart girl is going to show her hand by accepting a practical joker's first proposal. Rather, she's going to fence with his own weapons until she knows definitely whether he's joking or serious. And that may be what this girl is doing—holding you lightly to the bargain while seeming to make a joke of it. So I can only suggest that you bombard her with flowers, telegrams, telephone calls, fervent insistence that she accept a ring, name the day, forswear all other boy friends for you, and so forth and so on.

M. H.

Woman's Dress Problem.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In a recent column you touched on a subject very close to my heart—namely, clothes. You said, "It's a question of knowing what you can wear and what you shouldn't wear, in fabrics, colors, lines, accessories and so on." How can I learn what is right for me?

• • • •

I have taken one correspondence course only to find myself more muddled at the end than in the beginning. I have tried to buy clothes from saleswomen in good stores, to find they insist on dressing me in afternoon folderols when I have to tend a baby 24 hours a day. I don't have much time for shopping nor much money to spend, and I find I make an almost total waste of both.

• • • •

My shopping time usually consists of two hours Saturday afternoons, spent to the disgust of my husband and myself. I keep looking, promising myself not to spend one cent until I am satisfied, only to end up with almost anything to cover me for the particular season of the year. Can you help me learn, or, better, will you? Somehow I think you can. Most sincerely. FAITHFUL ADMIRER.

Choosing 'the Right Thing.'

DEAR F. A.: Never let a saleswoman sell you something you know positively is not suited to your type, your pocketbook or the purpose for which you will be wearing it. If your clothes allowance is limited and your style sense undeveloped, avoid "the latest thing," cheap materials and loud or splashy colors. Buy, one thing at a time, the best you can afford. It has been said it takes years of assiduous, careful shopping to build a smart, serviceable wardrobe on a limited allowance. And this means one must buy things which will stand up—in the way of suits, blouses, topcoats, dresses, shoes and bags.

• • • •

Never go shopping without a whole outfit in mind, even though it may be your intention to buy only one item of that outfit at present, be it dress, suit, hat, shoes or bag. I have a theory that women should dress to suit their feet. A woman can't look smart whose feet don't look comfortable, neat and fairly expensive. Shoes must fit not only the foot but the costume as well, particularly the hat. If you must wear sturdy walking shoes, your hat should be simple and serviceable looking, preferably a classic felt of the Dobbs or Stetson type. If you can wear high-heeled, lightweight pumps or straps, your hat may be giddier, though it probably won't stay in style as long. The simpler the lines, the more classic the style of any article of wearing apparel, the better is it going to serve you.

• • • •

I think afternoon clothes are superfluous in the average woman's wardrobe. In fall, winter and spring she can hold her own in the best-dressed daytime assemblages, from dawn to dark, in a simply tailored suit (black, oxford gray, navy or even brown, costing from $20 to $30), with hat, shoes and bag to match, and a topcoat to suit the season; or in a likewise simply styled crepe jacket ensemble, which means a slim-fitting dress with a short jacket of the same material and heavier wrap to wear when needed. For summer, linens, cottons and washable silks made on spectator sports lines are almost invariably becoming and extremely smart and economical besides. Crepes, chiffons and laces have little place in the summer wardrobe of the Washington woman of limited means.

• • • •

Though your purse is slim, don't confine your shopping to the bargain basements and cheaper emporiums. Boldly invade the swankier shops and departments and tell the salesperson with pleasant firmness that you are looking for a certain article not to exceed such-and-such a price. They have things—and desirable things—at modest prices as well as staggering figures. Don't look for shoes unless you have around $10 to spend; be prepared to spend at least $8 on a hat (though happily you may find one for less than half that); set aside around $25 for a suit, which can often be had for less, and from $15 to $25 for every fall-winter-spring dress. A spring-and-fall topcoat may be found for around $20, and a warm, good looking winter wrap which will do for years at a price beginning at $50. Good bags, costing around $5, are a sound investment if chosen with an eye to year-round service, for they wear better and look smarter than the cheaper variety. Big bags are more serviceable and impart greater chic than smaller ones.

• • • •

Your trouble, I imagine, is that you attempt, in two hours, to dress yourself for the season, with the added handicap that you haven't the slightest notion what you want. Study the advertisements, the smart fashion magazines, the women's periodicals, the fashion columns of the Sunday newspapers, to learn the season's range of styles and prices. Out of that composite picture, create an image of yourself, smartly, appropriately and becomingly dressed in a seasonable outfit you can afford, which will look just as well next year as this. You probably can't bring the picture alive overnight, but you can begin to put it together piece by piece, with what you already have as a nucleus. In building toward a better-dressed future, select items which look well in themselves, which "do something" for you, which tie in with what you already have, and which will match up, as well, with certain other things you expect to buy when you get around to them. And don't buy anything which doesn't meet each of these requirements.

• • • •

If you haven't an intuitive sense of "what is right" for you in the way of clothes, the only way to learn is by trying on and studying the effect with an objectively critical eye. When you put on something "right" it pulls you together, so to speak; your figure, face and feet make sense, as it were. You immediately like the looks of yourself. When something makes you look awkward, ungainly, out of proportion, haggard or flushed, nondescript or other than a really attractive version of yourself, it's not the right apparel for you.

She Sets the Style for Bicycling

Helynn Larsen, stylist for the League of American Wheelmen, wearing the new short culottes, she is sponsoring for bicycling. The top of the costume is sleeveless and backless, to cope with summer sun. The ankle socks and air-conditioned shoes, are other interesting features.

Bicycling Returns to Favor With New Fashions Designed by Experts for This Rejuvenated Sport

The following is the first of a series of articles on summer fashion trends by The Post's Fashion Editor who is surveying current styles at their sources, the merchandise markets and fashion openings.

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

NEW YORK, May 7.—"It is better to keep fit than fat, and one of the best and most pleasant methods of following this plan is bicycling," according to Helynn Larson, stylist for the League of American Wheelman. This fad of the gay nineties has returned to the sophisticated thirties—not as a fad, but as one of the most popular of the Nation's permanent sports. Not since 1899, have bicycle sales crossed the million and a quarter mark, Miss Larsen informed us, and with the vogue for feminine bicycling, designers are creating special clothes for this new old sport.

As a proof that cycling is an aid to health and beauty, Miss Larsen, who has just returned from Hollywood, and who will be in Washington next week, reports that the stars of the cinema have discarded motor cars for "bikes," and special parking lots have been planned for these modern two-wheel locomotion mediums. "There is absolutely no age limit to cycling," she said. "A woman in Philadelphia, who is 72 years old, has just taken it up. Shirley Temple now has her own bike, and it took her exactly five minutes to learn to ride."

The bicycle culotte is one of the smartest and most comfortable garments to add to your cycle wardrobe, Miss Larsen advises. Shorter culottes, with numerous pleats (resembling very full skirts) are the latest interpretations. Matching or contrasting jackets, particularly in brilliant colors, are the proper topping. Slacks are also much in evidence; also shorts and full skirts (resembling skating skirts), worn over simple shorts. If slacks are your preference, then be sure to add a pair of the clever new clips—these were inspired by the old-fashioned clips, worn by men bicyclists of the '90's, to hold trouser cuffs securely to the ankles.

Mess jackets with Gibson girl sleeves, plaid coronation jackets and snug cadet jackets are appearing in such materials as non-crush linens, gabardine, sharkskin, jersey, knits, chambray and flannel. For cool mornings, miniature jackets of suede are suggested.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Nature's Method.

Nature tries to protect our bodies and heal our wounds. Often she needs help, but generally she does a very good job. It would be hard to get along without her. If it were not for the fact that the body can heal its wounds, there would not be any surgeons: The surgeon can bring the edges of a cut together, but only nature can make them heal over.

One of nature's methods of treatment is by fever. Whenever you get an infection, your body raises its temperature one, two or three degrees. This was once supposed to be a bad thing. It was thought if fever got too high it was dangerous, and methods to reduce it were used. Now we feel that it is protective—that germs do not live and multiply in the high temperatures. That fever is really a protective mechanism.

It certainly is true that diseases, where the body responds with a high temperature, generally are cured in a short time. Many infections are sluggish and do not produce enough reaction in the body to cause a fever. In a number of these cases it has been found that if fever is artificially produced, beneficial effects will take place.

In our time the first disease to be treated in this way was paresis of the brain, and very striking results were obtained. Last year a review of the literature showed that no less than 50 different diseases have been treated in this way. The fever is produced usually by having the patient put in a hot cabinet. Most hospitals have one of these now in connection with their physical therapy department. A simpler method is to put them into a very hot bath. Among the diseases successfully treated in this way are the venereal or social diseases in all forms.

St. Vitus dance has been frequently treated with success. Bronchial asthmas has often yielded to this when other means have failed. Chronic arthritis has been benefited in many instances. In a large group of arthritis patients about 30 per cent have been greatly benefited, and about 30 per cent experienced some relief.

Quite a good deal of success has attended the treatment of chronic alcoholism by this method. This use of it started in a peculiar way when a chronic alcoholic told his doctor that he never felt like taking a drink when he had a cold and a fever. So they gave him a fever every other day for about three weeks and his desire for alcohol apparently went away, and he had strength of will enough to continue without it.

The treatment is sometimes weakening to those who are not strong, and everyone who is going to take it should have an examination by a physician. People of advanced age should not attempt it, as it is too debilitating for them.

TONGUE-TIED! Afraid they'll say the wrong thing again. They can feel their English won't go in the smart crowd they'd like to travel with.

"I was in hopes of seeing Mr. Bond," he said. "If I'd of known there was any chance of him leaving so soon I'd of come earlier. Oh, we'll just set down anywheres."

Pretty Mary could be the center of this gay group, charming with her merry chatter, if only she'd said "very," not "real," and "invitation" for "invite."

Jack could be making valuable social and business contacts if he'd get rid of his verb trouble and say "I was hoping to," "If I had known," "I would have come," and "we'll sit down."

Too bad he hasn't learned to say "of his leaving." It's wrong to say "of him leaving"—and to tack an "s" to "anywhere."

Jack and Mary will be held back by their speech as long as they say "between you and me." "Mother and Myself went" for "Mother and I went."

People who get ahead iron out rough spots, learn to say "child" for "kid"; "I have but one" for "I haven't but one"; "that persons," not "that party."

Send 15c for our booklet, "Common Errors in English," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Sunshine Greets Spectators as the Junior League Opens Horse Show With Scores of Fine Mounts, Fortune Telling and Various Concessions

By Marylyn Reeve.

The 1937 Washington Horse Show opened yesterday at Meadowbrook with sunshine, spectators and scores of fine mounts out for the occasion. Junior League girls, who sponsored the show, were among the exhibitors, in the audience and everywhere about the grounds, clad in their jade-green smocks, selling programs, ushering, drawing caricatures and conducting various concessions.

Near the refreshment stands, Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, wearing a printed crepe frock, black coat and matching wide-brimmed felt hat, was telling fortunes—and good ones, too—as she does each year to aid the Junior League's social service fund.

Adjacent to the clubhouse, two pens of young dogs, dachshunds and an old-fashioned pug dog, in one, and sad-faced little cocker spaniels in the other, attracted attention. There, also, was Mrs. Lawrence Wood Roberts' goat, Bill, which she had on a leash and which won a share of attention wherever he went.

Many of the spectators arrived in the morning to watch the classes and brought hamper lunches along. Among them were Mrs. Ernest Draper, in a good-looking tailored outfit of shades of gray, with Mme. Recinos, wife of the Minister of Guatemala, in dark blue, and Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Minister of Yugoslavia, in violet with a matching band on her white straw hat; Mrs. Stanley Reed, in black with a white butterfly poised on the front of her straw hat; Mrs. Robert Jackson, in a blue suit with a blouse of a lighter shade, and Mrs. Richard Wilmer, in black with a straw hat of black and cream.

Maj. Frank Whittaker, who was taking part in the show, spent most of his time hurrying from the paddock to the box where Mrs. Whittaker, attired in rose beige, sat with their daughter, Mrs. Louis de Lesdernier, in blue with hat and accessories of coral, who is visiting them for a short time. Mrs. de Lesdernier, the former Miss Jane Whittaker, was married only a few months ago.

A mild flurry of excitement was caused when someone recognized Mrs. Jock Whitney's companion as Bruce Cabot of screen fame, and countless young girls and a few older ones hastened to have their programs autographed. Mrs. Whitney, who is one of the most nonchalant exhibitors, was wearing checkered brown and tan tweeds, no hat and her dark hair was parted in the middle and brushed smoothly back to a low knot.

Two well-known equestriennes, who were seen talking together while awaiting their turn in the ring, were Miss Emily North King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin King, of Warrenton, and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert.

Among those seen along the ringside were Mrs. Carlos Delmar, in a printed frock and picture hat of black straw banded in white; Prince Osman, Commissioner Melvin Hazen, Dr. and Mrs. James Alexander Lyons, Col. and Mrs. Jonathan Wainwright, she in two-toned gray with soft rose blue; Mrs. F. K. Reybold and her daughter, Miss Marion Reybold, the latter in a gay-striped woolen suit with which she wore a yellow suede off-the-face hat trimmed with brown ribbon.

Others there were Mr. and Mrs. Reed Thomas, she in dark blue with a wide-brimmed Breton sailor; Miss Christine Ekengren, in tan riding habit with smart checked vest; Mrs. William Sturtevant, in sky blue; Miss Patricia Ridsdale, costumed in aquamarine linen with matching kerchief tied about her head in Southern fashion; Miss Anne Hagner, Mrs. Frederick Van Lennep, in lemon riding breeches and gray checked coat, and Mrs. John L. Hines, in gray with wide-brimmed straw sailor and slippers of vivid green.

Miss Gertrude Laughlin, whose performance riding Gray Dawn in the side saddle, brought enthusiastic applause from across the rails, between classes joined her father, Mr. Irwin Laughlin, former Ambassador to Spain. Two other young Washington ladies who were popular riders in yesterday's show were Miss Louise Chase Myers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, on her horse, Tandem, and Miss Margaret Cotter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Cotter, whose mount, Rocksie, gave its usual good performance.

Also attending the show were Mrs. Arthur Thayer, Mrs. Henri Luabbermann, in tan; Miss Dolores Barreto, Miss Yolande de Mauduit, Mrs. Reginald Meade, Mrs. John Grove, Mrs. John de Sibour, Miss Betty Beale and Miss Martha Davidge.

Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, was the ranking guest at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. J. Bruce Kremer, who entertained in honor of her house guests, Mrs. Bartow S. Weeks and Mrs. John Turner, of New York; Mrs. Ray Hackett, of Stamford, Conn., and Mrs. Herbert Kistler, of Butte, Mont.

The first of a series of three dances to be given at the 1925 F Street Club this spring was held last evening. The guests danced inside and tables were set up in the large garden. A dinner was served at 9 o'clock and through the evening. There were about 125 guests from Washington and 16 from out of town.

Lewis; assistant treasurer, Mrs. H. J. Russell McNitt.

Reports of the several team captains working under Mrs. William C. Borden as chairman for the benefit of hospital work were encouraging. It is anticipated that the results of this drive will be equal to those secured from large public benefits held in other years. The members of the board also have been co-operating in the general drive for hospital funds which was recently held.

Film Society Shown Movies Of Other Years

Museum of Modern Art Exhibits Old Pictures From Library.

Members of Capital society interested in the forthcoming work of the Film Society of Washington gathered at the Sulgrave Club yesterday afternoon to see old motion pictures from the Film Library of the Museum of Modern Art. The Film Society hopes next fall to obtain a large enough subscription list to be able to show twice a month movies which are not available commercially. These would include documentary, foreign and controversial films, and pictures made at the beginning of the industry.

Mr. Robert Lincoln O'Brien, chairman of the society, spoke on its formation yesterday and John E. Abbott, director of the Film Library, described its function. Miss Iris Barry, curator of the library, told of experiences as one of the organizers in 1925, in London, of the first library of this kind.

Among the movies shown yesterday were early newsreels, "The Great Train Robbery," the ancestor of cowboy and crook films, and "The New York Hat," starring Mary Pickford and Lionel Barrymore, hardly recognizable in the role of the misjudged minister.

Among those present were Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, trustee of the Museum of Modern Art; Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, herself an artist; Mrs. Dean Acheson, the Chinese Ambassador; Dr. Alfred Sao-Ke Sze, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, who wore a navy blue coat trimmed with fox, and a small navy blue straw hat; Mme. Troyanovsky, wife of the Soviet Ambassador; Miss Olivia Stokes, Mrs. Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Miss Matilda Young, secretary of the Film Society, and Miss Barbara Wright.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn.

Margaret Ann Rademacher, who is endowed with brains as well as good looks, has the most delightful Southern drawl you ever hope to hear. She is here now taking a very deep interest in art in all of its phases, but particularly photography.

Margaret, who hails from Alabama and is a graduate of the university of that State, went out to the Navajo reservation to do a bit of teaching just after she received her degree. The first thing she had to learn was the Indian language so that she could make herself understood and teach English to the class of young Indians. Well, after several months of working with them she was quite proud of their progress, and the inspectors, or whatever they are, came around on their yearly call to see how things were going.

The class was put through its paces and Margaret, somewhat nervous about the impression her pupils would make, was horrified to hear the inspectors and committee chuckling merrily at the whole recitation. To say that she was embarrassed would be putting it mildly. Finally she could stand it no longer and bravely marched herself over to one of the spectators and asked him what was wrong.

At luncheon in the Carlton yesterday saw handsome Pat Hurley striding along between the tables to his own small one off in a corner, there to have a snack, a few quick glances at a newspaper —then back to the office desk for him.

Across the room from the former Secretary of War, sat Admiral and Mrs. Robert Henderson with Mrs. Brewster Warwick and her daughter, Mrs. Knight.

Seeing the admiral reminded us of the time he was stationed in the near East, some ten years ago, and was given the task of getting the U. S. S. Scorpion back into the pink of condition. The ship, having lain idle much too long, was heavily barnacled and no one was exactly envying the officer his job of "face-lifting" the vessel. At a tea party just before the work was to commence, every guest—having been properly prompted by someone with a sense of humor—arrived bringing something to help—such as a bit of hammered-out tin (an old tobacco can), a whisp of string, shred of canvas, old paint brush and the like.

Mrs. V. A. L. Mallett, wife of the Counselor of the British Embassy, was out bright and early yesterday morning, walking downtown. Her frock was of soft blue, made on simple lines with short sleeves and her felt hat a darker shade of blue. In one hand she held her handbag and in the other a leash at the end of which, Nitter, a graceful whippet, stepped daintily along.

New clubs with startling names are forever springing up in this town. The latest is the Gunpowder Club. Its name sounds as though it might be anything from a group of congenial chemists to rod and gun (specially the latter) enthusiasts, but that is where the hitch comes in. It is made up of a group of girls who spend their time, when not doing Red Cross work and going the usual tiring pace, playing bridge, riding or what will you? It all started when Mary Agnes Young was entertaining in her home near Observatory Circle. She served some sort of beverage, either coffee, tea or cocoa, and it was particularly delicious. Time after time guests inquired as to the brand and were told that it was Gunpowder such and such—which accounts for the name.

Saw Mary Win Brown in her sleek touring car, top down, sun streaming in, whipping up Connecticut and around Dupont Circle. All of which reminds us of the time Win, in another touring car of her's a year or so ago, was driving downtown. Again she had the top down. This time she was having difficulty with her motor and as the cars behind her became impatient and endeavored to cheer her on with inharmonious tootings of horns, the gear came right out in the astonished driver's hand. Looking at it but a scant moment, "Win by now a little annoyed by the repeated bleatings of waiting cars, hauled the disconnected bit of machinery forth and waved it aloft, much like an uprooted plant, for all to see and know her troubles.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

ALICE HUGHES.

WHEN I READ that Mr. Melvin Purvis, former G-Man, and Janice Jarratt, the famous model, also known as "the Sweetheart of San Anton," had indefinitely postponed their nuptials because of a spat, or tiff, over the trivial fact that the Jorgeous Jarratt was late for an appointment, I realized all over again how badly trained most of our men are.

If there is one thing which a woman must be permitted by that other, and very droll, sex, it is the privilege of tardiness for luncheons, dinners and anything you choose. We have a thousand things to do to their one—in fact, we have so much of fussing and primping on our minds that we forget over half of these things until we are well down the front steps, or even around the corner. And the man who is permitted to get jumpy, or even hysterical, about such a thing as a half-hour's nonappearance for a date, is simply the miserable result of poor bringing-up by his lady friend.

Without violating any confidence I can safely say that I am known on Manhattan Island as "The Late Miss Hughes," and nihil nisi mortuis bonum! So complex is my daily schedule, plus the natural tardiness which is the prerogative of our sex, that I am quite apt to be a good three-quarters of an hour late for a free meal. I just don't seem to be able to help it. Those who don't like it are privileged to walk away, snarling.

But it took a lot of doing to train the fading bloom who is my spouse. For several years he didn't like it, but he waited, just the same. And training counts, with the men. In my case, having trained the brute so well, he doesn't wait, either. He walks off, muttering. Poor Mel and Janice!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The habitual party-goers here—I think they number about 142—because the same names appear in the paper every day—had the duckiest time of all the other afternoon at a big benefit raffle held on the roof of the Hotel St. Regis. There were so many prizes! Why, Mrs. Joseph E. Davis, who needs it about as much as I need a story to write, won a real ermine cape, and Mrs. William Stackpoole, a wealthy lady, copped a dinner party for four at the Colony Restaurant, where caviar is a dollar a fishegg! And of course there were laughs, too. For instance, four men won permanent waves! Isn't it killing? No . . .

Reminds me of my cub days in the newspaper business. Every Christmas the printers in the composing room raffled off a turkey, and all we reporters took chances, of course. But, somehow, a printer always won the darned turkey. I could never figure it out. I still can't, but I love all members of the Typographical Union; remember that, you printers.

I hear that Katharine Hepburn may never be seen here in "Jane Eyre," which was so successful on tour. Her movie bosses in Hollywood want her to stay on the lot and tend to business, and the Theater Guild, the play's producers, are squabbling with the author, Helen Jerome. At least, Katie won't have to face the Broadway dramatic critics again—the stern lads who gave her such a batting about in "The Lake" a few years ago . . .

That fabulous author, Hendrick Willem van Loon, who writes books of stupendous size, has just turned over 300,000 words on "The Arts" to his publishers, and has gone back to work on his next, "Beethoven." Willem is nothing if not cosmic. And he it is who draws little pictures instead of writing notes. He used to send such to me. They consisted of a tortoise and a red, red rose. Modesty forbids me to guess which was which.

Here's the backbone of a summer city wardrobe, according to Kay Thomas, one of our smart and pretty style commentators — a tailored crepe, an afternoon sheer and a slim, simple evening gown. Total, three frocks. Of course, if you get a Mrs. Harrison Williams complex, Father's check book's the limit. But that trio seems to me to make good sense. And Mr. Harrison Williams can't count his millions, as we can, on the toes of one hand.

Tyrolean Sunshades.

Ideal for summer wear with Tyrolean sweaters is the transparent sunshade in the accessory wardrobe of Virginia Bruce, movie actress. The dainty umbrella is clear white and across its surface is painted designs in the gay Tyrolean manner. The shade is edged in straw fringe, and a frill of straw ornaments the top.

Girl Scouts Will Show Skill In Parties for Mother's Day

Special Treats Will Be Provided to Reveal Prowess.

By Rebekah Blake.

TOMORROW is Mother's Day. Why not take a tip from the Girl Scouts and do something to lighten mother's labor? Why not prepare some special dish for the Sunday dinner or even plan and cook the entire meal? Or, perhaps, you could take mother's breakfast to her on a tray? Or serve afternoon tea to your family as a special treat and surprise.

Learning to cook is an important part of the Girl Scouts' program. Helping others is another part of their code. So in connection with Mother's Day many Girl Scouts are planning to show their prowess in the kitchen. Others have already provided special treats for their mothers.

The Girl Scouts of Troop 29 entertained their mothers at tea Thursday afternoon under the supervision of the troop leader, Mrs. L. E. Warren, and with the assistance of Mrs. C. E. Rightor, of 102 West Underwood street, Chevy Chase, Md., where the tea was held, the girls sent a personal invitation to each mother for the party, made the fancy tea cakes, ordered the mints and nuts, saw to it that mother looked her prettiest when she arrived at the party, poured the tea and served it. Each mother was presented with a small corsage of violets. For the cakes, the girls used their favorite recipes.

Aside from doing something for their mothers, these girls are accomplishing another aim. Some of them are working for their hostess badges. These took the responsibilities of sending the invitations and serving at the tea. The girls working for their cooking badges prepared the cakes for the party.

Girl Scouts are well supplied with simple and appetizing recipes and these offer suggestions to any girl who wants to do something special for her mother tomorrow. Here is a menu suggestion for the Sunday dinner which combines many of the favorite dishes of the Girl Scouts:

Assorted Canapes
Roast Meat Loaf
White Potatoes Roasted With the Meat
Molded Spinach
Hot Rolls Butter
Macaroni Fruit Salad
Coffee Milk
One Egg Cake With Chocolate Frosting

Roast Meat Loaf.

Remove meat from 1 pound fresh pork chops and put through food chopper with 1½ pounds lean beef, add ½ cup stale bread crumbs, ¾ cup milk, 2 teaspoons salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper and 2 eggs slightly beaten. Cut a piece of heavy paper in oval shape; put in dripping-pan, grease it and mold meat loaf on paper, packing firmly to about 2 inches thickness. Surround with 4 potatoes, pared, quartered and boiled ten minutes. Bake for ten minutes at 450 degrees F. and then for 25 to 30 minutes at 400 degrees F. Baste at first with hot water and afterwards with fat in pan. Remove from oven, drain off liquid, invert meat on platter, remove paper and surround with potatoes.

Molded Spinach.

Pick over 2 pounds spinach, wash thoroughly in seven waters to remove every particle of sand, discard stems, cut in pieces and steam eight to ten minutes. Chop slightly, add 2 tablespoons butter and press in mold. Invert on platter and garnish with hard cooked egg slices.

Macaroni-Fruit Salad.

1 cup chopped apples
1 cup mayonnaise
1 can fruit cocktail
1 cup chopped celery

Cook macaroni in salted, boiling water, till tender. Drain and chill. When cold, combine with the vegetables and fruit. Marinate with mayonnaise and serve on lettuce leaf.

One Egg Cake.

1 egg
½ cup milk

Progress in Learning to Cook Will Be Demonstrated.

2½ teaspoons baking powder

Cream butter, add sugar gradually, and egg well beaten. Mix and sift flour and baking powder. Add alternately with the milk to the first mixture. Bake 30 minutes in shallow pan. Spread with Chocolate frosting.

Chocolate Confectioners' Frosting.

Melt 1 square chocolate in small sauce pan over hot water, add 1 teaspoon butter and 1½ tablespoons scalded milk and confectioners sugar to make of the right consistency to spread.

Raisin Recipes Enliven Menu During Spring

NATIONAL RAISIN WEEK, May 9 to 15, will be celebrated for the twenty-ninth consecutive year.

Menus exemplifying the versatility of raisins are especially featured this week by railroads, steamships, airways, hotels and restaurants, so why not let them predominate in your family menus?

Chefs, stewards and homemakers have come to know the flavorful keeping quality with which raisins endow cakes, breads and cookies as well as the goodness which this fruit contributes to foods. These bits of fruit make any common food a little out of the ordinary.

Here are a few raisin recipes which may help liven your menus this week:

Stuffed Meat Loaf.

1 pound pork
1 pound beef
2 eggs
Stuffing:
½ cup seedless raisins
6 cups bread cubes, toasted
½ onion, dry, chopped
½ cup chopped celery
1 pound beef
2 eggs
3 tablespoons chopped parsley
Salt and pepper
¼ teaspoon sage
1 cup soup stock

Grind meats together. Season and blend with eggs. Put into a thin square on oiled paper. Rinse raisins and drain. Combine with all stuffing ingredients and mix. Cover meat with thoroughly blended stuffing and roll as for jelly roll. Place in an oiled pan and brush top and sides with oil. Bake in a moderate oven (350 F.) 1¾ to 2 hours. Serve with tomato sauce enriched with chopped ripe olives or mushrooms.

Conserve Leftovers.

Leftover potatoes and rice sour quickly, especially in warm weather. Before putting them in a refrigerator, arrange them in a thin layer in a shallow pan.

Gelatin Dishes Feature Post's Recipe Contest

JELLIED SALADS and desserts, and entrees, just seem to "hit the spot" on these fresh spring days.

With the weather bringing them to mind, no doubt you have found a gelatin or jello recipe that you consider "perfect" and deserving of a cash prize. If you have, submit it in The Post Gelatin Recipe Contest and you may win one of the awards for this contest. These are $3 for first prize, $2 for second prize, and $1 for each of the three additional prizes.

You may have a favorite recipe for tomato aspic jelly, cold sliced tongue with jelly, coffee jelly, grated carrots and dandelions in gelatin, orange, cheese and nut balls in gelatin, or strawberry, or lemon or chocolate gelatin pie. Or jellied asparagus salad, fruit jelly, jellied crabmeat salad, ham loaf or ring salad may be your winner.

Regardless of the recipe, if it is made with gelatin or jelly, copy it neatly and send it to Rebekah Blake, The Post Food Editor, so she will receive it not later than noon of next Saturday. Be sure to copy your name and address on your recipe.

Only one recipe will be accepted from each contestant.

Screen Comedy Leads Bill at Loew's Capitol

"WOMAN CHASES MAN." Samuel Goldwyn production for United Artists release, costarring Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea, with Charles Winninger, Erik Rhodes, Broderick Crawford and strong supporting cast. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris at Loew's Capitol Theater.

With the actual explosion and burning of the great airship Hindenburg recorded as picture news, the newsreel this week would dominate any man's show. The pictures of this catastrophe, as caught by Cameraman Sam Gold and shown at the Capitol this week, take high rank in newsreel history as the only actual "on the stop" pictures of a major dirigible accident.

Full sequence of the Hindenburg incineration appears from the first great blast and rush of flame followed by human figures jumping, dropping, running, falling, staggering from the fiery tomb of Germany's pride of the air, to the final searing of the great red-shining metal skeleton in running flame. It is a newsreel that brings you up gasping—one that will never be forgotten and will take its place in the most important historic files of the movie industry.

Lighter Things.

Skipping to the purely entertaining part of the Capitol bill, one finds highly fluffy but not dealcoholized comedy in "Woman Chases Man." Despite the rumors that drinking scenes are frowned upon by the high command of the film industry, the crux of this amusing and agreeable little picture revolves about a champagne binge undertaken by Miriam Hopkins to bring Joel McCrea to the proposing point. Joel reaches boiling point all right, but fails to propose. Miriam passes out and Joel carries her upstairs like a sack of meal.

Then Joel drinks some brandy on top of the champagne at the instance of a designing siren (Leona Mariole). Just how the revived Miriam and Joel find themselves in the top of a tree is something you must see to appreciate. It suffices to say that true love wins the day (we think we mean the evening) but without getting sober.

Joel McCrea, who seems to be leading man in every other picture coming to Washington, turns in another ingratiating performance. Miriam Hopkins' role is hardly up to her dramatic possibilities, but she makes a neat and pretty job of it. Charles Winninger is his usual jolly self, as Joel's feather-headed poppa, intent on a bubbly real estate promotion and trying to get the capital from his usually solid-minded son. Erick Rhodes in one of his slick continental parts and Broderick Crawford as a movie usher subbing as butler. Both contribute juicy comedy.

Yesterday's performance was enriched by a brief personal appearance of Broderick Crawford (he's Helen Broderick's son) along with Linton Wells, representative of Sam Goldwyn. This was quite nice, but it's too bad the gentlemen didn't polish up their brief appearance to stage standards.

Anna May Is Lovely.

Anna May Wong, gorgeous first in a Chinese ceremonial costume, is equally entrancing to the eye in one of those high-necked but split-skirted gowns of brocade, favored by modern Chinese girls for evening wear. Singing both in Chinese and English and to tossing in a couple of dramatic bits, Miss Wong proves quite as delightful, and less sinister, than in the movies.

Funsters Frank Mitchell and Jack Durant were welcomed, rewelcomed and encored by the audience. They give the Hollywood tang to their carryings-on, even though a bit on the rough-and-tumble side.

Trans-Lux

The flames that swept the Hindenburg—Germany's prize dirigible—to her doom at Lakehurst on Thursday night are sweeping across the screen at the Trans-Lux Theater this week.

By Friday noon, Roland Robbins had the first of the news camera shots unfolding before audiences, and the program this reviewer caught was loaded with remarkable views of the disaster taken by four of the major film companies.

These are doubtless the greatest films of this or any recent year. The cameramen were waiting to welcome the Hindenburg and when the explosion occurred and fire consumed the craft the cameras were already turned on the ship. The lenses captured everything—even to the survivors jumping and stumbling in panic from the inferno. For sheer, spell-binding drama these pictures are superb.

Antidote for Tragedy.

A far cry from major air tragedies is the Virginia Gold Cup Steeplechase, which is nearer home, at Warrenton, one of the interesting news highlights, together with the horse and dog shows at Chevy Chase. The other chief events in the Trans-Lux news line-up include the magical history of photography, with some of the old cameras on display; another peep at English royalty, this time the Duke and Duchess of Kent; Philadelphia going for the Constitution in a big way, and some delightful shots of the Shenandoah apple fete.

Variety punctuates the rest of the bill, with a ramble through the city of waltzes, Vienna; a closeup of Saratoga, where the sports world looms large and the ponies trot nicely; a brief subject on what you can do to make a living, and the screen's great hero, Donald Duck, in his spring encounter with a mountain goat.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

'Wings of the Morning,' in Technicolor, And Shep Fields Share Honors at Earle

Racing Picture and Ace Band Divide Top Spots on Bill of General Appeal.

"WINGS OF THE MORNING." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story derived from the writings of Dana Burke, adapted to the screen by Tom Geraghty, featuring Annabella and Henry Fonda, with Stewart Rome, Irene Vanbrugh, Harry Tate, Sam Livesay, Leslie Banks, John McCormack, Steve Donoghue, E. V. H. Emmett and Capt. R. C. Lyle. Directed by Harold Schuster. Previewed Wednesday, May 5.

BELL.

There are so many divergent elements of appeal in this subject that its execution in the new three-tone Technicolor process becomes of secondary importance, although a great aid to realism.

The story of "Wings of the Morning" concerns itself primarily with four generations of English aristocracy, nomadic Gypsies and race horses. Romance plays a strong part in the narrative, but at times is subordinated to the sheer beauty of the scenes of pastoral Ireland in which much of the action is laid. The dramatic recital here recorded is not too connected or coherent, but it contrives to hold together a long succession of episodes that are exciting and picturesque.

Several notables are introduced during the tale of the Gypsy who married an Englishman of noble ancestry and won a permanent grant on his lands. Among them are John McCormack, the famous Irish tenor, who sings several songs in as fine voice as he ever has revealed, and Steve Donoghue, the noted British jockey, who rides the Gypsy horse to victory in the Derby at Epsom Downs.

This Epsom Downs sequence is one of the most colorful in the picture, not alone because it is done in natural colors, but because the pageantry of the event has been caught with rare fidelity. The running of the race brings back to mind some of the old spectacles that used to be done at Drury Lane in London, like "The Whip" and other thrillers of like nature.

Annabella At Her Best.

In the principal feminine role of Marie, the crown princess of the Romany Tribe, Annabella does rather the best work she ever has disclosed upon an American screen. She has been seen on this side previously in one or two minor items that were presented at the Belasco. Annabella is a young woman of unquestionable charm and ability, who one moment looks like Elissa Landi and the next almost exactly like Constance Cummings, wife of Benn Levy, English playwright. Opposite her appears Henry Fonda, who also acquits himself with fine credit. Fonda is a young horse trainer, who falls in love—with both the girl and the horse. During this complex process there are many incidents of dramatic effectiveness introduced, along with moments of purling beauty that leave a lasting impression in memory.

The other members of the cast are not especially well known to American audiences, with the possible exception of Leslie Banks and Irene Vanbrugh, who do yeomen's service in salvaging the film on the side of credibility. McCormack's voice and Steve Donoghue's jockeying, of course, are priceless assets to the picture's authentic appeal. Some of the Gypsy sequences are just a little grotesque.

Shep Fields Scores.

On the stage at the Earle this week there is another of the country's best bands. Shep Fields comes to town with a group of instrumentalists who play melodiously and without the blatancy of so many of the so-called "jazz" orchestras. Fields does not play "jazz." He may "swing" a bit, but it is all on the side of tuneful rhythms that fall graciously on the ear.

Among the specialists who appear with this sterling organization are Bobby Goday, Sunny Rice, one of the more adept of the tap dancers; Lynn Martin and the Merry Macs, a girl and three boys who sing delightfully before the microphone, and Bob Dupont, the most deft of the jugglers to come along since Stan Kavanaugh quit the variety stage to lend his amusing talents to the Shubert's production of the "Ziegfeld Follies," coming to the National on Monday. This Dupont chap possesses a degree of dexterity that is completely confounding. He makes a few mistakes, to be sure, but one suspects that they are done for effect rather than through any inexpertness on the part of the performer. He was the hit of the show yesterday.

Columbia

"WAIKIKI WEDDING." Paramount picturization of a story by Frank Butler and Don Hartman, adapted to the screen by Frank Butler, Don Hartman, Walter DeLeon and Francis Martin, starring Bing Crosby, with Bob Burns, Martha Raye, George Barbier, Shirley Ross, Leif Erikson, Grady Sutton, Mitchell Lewis, Prince Lei Lani, Maurice Liz and Raquel Echeverria. Directed by Frank Tuttle.

This melodious and scenically beautiful study of romantic things that might, and often do, happen in the Hawaiian Islands has renewed its downtown popularity on the screen of Loew's Columbia Theater as chief feature for the week. Bing Crosby has never sung better than he does in this subject, often supported by native instrumentalists and singers. Toots Paka, who introduced Hawaiian music with her troubadours in Belasco's production of Richard Walton Tully's "The Bird of Paradise," starring Lenore Ulric, would have been amazed to hear what Mr. Crosby and his associates are able to do with some of her native ballads in this number.

The story of "Waikiki Wedding" is a tenuous sort of affair that carries none too much weight, but it suffices to string together a considerable list of interesting adventures, with the beauties of the tropics for a background.

The bill at the Columbia this week is augmented by the usual short-reel subjects and the astonishingly realistic pictures of the Hindenburg explosion and fire at Lakehurst Thursday night.

Plays Lead in Technicolor Film

This smiling young man is Henry Fonda, who appears in the principal male role in "Wings of the Morning," the Technicolor production now on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. Mr. Fonda, one of the most amiable of the screen's leading men, in this subject is cast opposite Annabella, the engaging young European actress with the charming accent and the limpid eyes. She plays a Gypsy.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, May 7.—Idol chatter: Won't it be ironic if the children of handsome Gene Raymond and beautiful Jeanette MacDonald turn out plain? How Mary Pickford must shudder at the tallness of the tree she planted years ago in a community movement. Grim alikes: Henry Fonda and John Beal. Her fear of earthquakes made Joan Crawford order shatter-proof glass for her shower bath. Impressionistic drawing of Jean Harlow: Venus de Milo before the accident (in which she lost her arms, silly).

JEANETTE MACDONALD.

• • • •

Those double heels George Raft wears to add height give him a slightly effeminate swagger. Hunch for Bing Crosby theme song: "Horses, horses, horses." Alice Faye's performances always impress me that they are better than I had expected. Morning mail note: "When I think of Leslie Howard I think of his 'Hamlet,' but when I think of 'Hamlet' I never think of Leslie Howard." Casting suggestion: Shirley Temple as "Little Goldilocks."

• • • •

La femme touche: Cary Grant's chin cleft, Clark Gable's dimple, Gene Raymond's wavy hair, Leslie Howard's pretty legs. George O'Brien's shirts are tailor-made so the sleeves will be roomy enough for his beefy muscles. Note to thief who stole Ann Dvorak's pickled walnuts; Wait six weeks before eating, else you will be ptomained.

• • • •

Something else that was brought to my attention today: What the passage of time means to former movie stars and current audiences. It seems that a social leader of Hollywood long wanted to have her children meet Mary Pickford. She tried many times to arrange the event, and before Mary went to Europe this month, succeeded. I suppose it was a proud moment when she paraded Miss Pickford before her three kiddies (ages 10, 8 and 6 years), who had dressed their spickest for the occasion. But what a shock it must have been when the 8-year-old demanded of Our Mary: "What do you do in pictures.

From the manager of one of the town's biggest department stores comes this anecdote about Shirley Temple. The little curly top accompanied her mother to this store the other day, and while Mrs. Temple shopped, Shirley begged a clerk to let her help unpack a box of merchandise. Just as the last article took its place on the shelf, the store manager arrived with Mrs. Temple. Thinking to be friendly, the manager asked, "What can I do for you, Miss Temple?"

"Well sir," retorted the child, I've been helping out here this afternoon, and I'd like my pay!"

'Star Is Born' Is a Well-Acted Film at Palace

"A STAR IS BORN." Selznick International's picturization of a story by Robert Carson and William Wellman, adapted to the screen by Dorothy Parker, Alan Campbell and Robert Carson, starring Janet Gaynor and Fredric March, supported by Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Peggy Wood, Andy Devine, Lionel Stander and Edgar Kennedy. Directed by William Wellman. Reviewed Friday evening by Dorothea Lewis.

A Cinderella story with a very bitter twist, this premiering picture is intensely interesting and adult. It will hurt, if you have any pity, and it will worry you, if you think there should be kindness in the world.

This is the story of a failure as well as a success, for a star dies while a new star is being born, and he dies largely because people are cruel far beyond the cruelty that he can take. A prescribed course in this picture may make even hard-boiled critics kind for a week or two.

The story is the story of little Esther Victoria Blodgett, who comes from the Dakotas to Hollywood and goes up to fame, and of Norman Maine, whom she marries as he goes down. To us, the ascent seemed too easy, after an introduction showing how difficult it is to crash the cinema, and the descent seemed too hard.

Is Subtly Played.

But within the framework of the plot, there can be no caviling with production or performances. It is a shooting script, with its 253 scenes fading in and out from broad humor to tragedy, no less stark because it is subtly played. At times parts of the picture verge on burlesque, but you remember all those stories about Hollywood and decide that it is probably impossible to burlesque Hollywood. The picture is too long, but it is always compelling. It might be much better but not more honest and it has an integrity and factualness about most of it that is important. It doesn't spare people, victims or victimizers.

Both Janet Gaynor and Fredric March are excellent. To us—probably because we're Miss not Mr.—it seems a shade more March's picture in spite of his comparatively slight footage and the focus on Miss Gaynor's role. Without one bit of overplaying or overstressing, he creates the terribly tragic figure of a slipping, drinking idol, who fights the good fight until there is no margin of resistance left. March plays with compassion and understanding. In the character as written and played, there seems no reason for the venom of his attackers.

A Triumphant Comeback.

Janet Gaynor makes a most triumphant return from a rather long vacation and is altogether lovely in Technicolor which at last reveals the famous red hair. She plays sympathetically and with poise and charm beyond her usual performance.

Adolphe Menjou, May Robson and Andy Devine give fine support. Lionel Stander is quite despicable as the press agent, and Edgar Kennedy is a pleasant and tenderhearted landlord. Peggy Wood appears briefly.

The color work is beautiful and so natural that you forget to "oh" and "ah" over it, which is as it should be. There are laughs as well as tears and the love story is very believable. We liked the picture exceedingly, others may not.

The subsidiaries are notable, including a newsreel picture of the Hindenburg horror (certainly a scoop in getting news on the screen and into the theaters in record time), a new Silly Symphony, "More Kittens," and Bob Benchley in a little item about the "Romance of Digestion."

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

The very simplest plays to safeguard shaky contracts are often missed by inexperienced players. In today's hand North and South got up to a very tenuous slam contract which, however, could have been made by careful handling. South overlooked the key play.

North, dealer.

	♠ 9 7 ♡ A 8 ◇ A Q 10 9 3 3 ♣ 6 5 2
♠ Q 6 4 2 ♡ J 5 4 ◇ K 7 ♣ Q J 9 4	North West East South	♠ J 10 5 3 ♡ 7 6 ◇ J 5 4 ♣ K 10 8 3
	♠ A K 8 ♡ K Q 10 9 3 2 ◇ 8 6 ♣ A 7

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the Queen of clubs and South won at once with the Ace. He would have been better advised to hold up the Ace, but even without that play he should have made his slam. At the second trick he took the diamond finesse—a good play at this point since entries to South's hand were to prove scarce. His next step was to cash the Ace of hearts, after which he took three rounds of spades, ruffing the last in the dummy.

A club lead at this point would have assured South an entry to his own hand (by means of a later club ruff) in order to draw the rest of his trumps. But declarer cashed the Ace of diamonds and then led a club.

East promptly played the King of clubs, and returned the Jack of diamonds. Regardless of South's play, West was bound to make his Jack of hearts.

Despite the fact that South needed a trump break and the diamond finesse for his slam, he had to make three mistakes in order to lose it. He could have made sure of his vital entry to draw trumps by holding up on the first club trick; by leading a club before taking the Ace of diamonds; or even by leading a third round of diamonds and discarding his losing club.

The moral of this hand, if there is one, is that players like South should either improve their play of the cards or stop bidding shaky slams.

"THAT MAN'S HERE AGAIN." First National picturization of a story by J. R. Wylie, adapted to the screen by Lillie Hayward, starring Hugh Herbert, with Tom Brown, Mary McGuire, Joseph King, Teddy Hart, Dorothy Vaughan, Arthur Aylesworth, Tetsui Komai and James Burtis. Directed by Louis King. Reviewed Friday evening at the Metropolitan Theater by Sally Stroud.

"That Man's Here Again" in a delightful story which will suit the entire family. Hugh Herbert and his whoo-whoo-ing laugh contribute an evening of gentle fun which is a welcome respite from screen extravaganzas.

Mr. H. is cast as an amiable Mr. James, not Jesse, but that will do), whose 'poetic license' gets him into all sorts of scrapes, terminating in his getting lifted out of an elegant apartment wherein stood his Ming vase around which much of the plot rings itself.

Elevator Boy Jimmie (Tom Brown) and apartment-maid Nancy (Mary McGuire), become the proteges of Mr. James. Nancy has a cunning infant which must be housed somewhere, so Mr. James takes over the apartment of a rich oaf whom he subsequently blackmails in a delicate sort of manner. The neat little tale fades out, on a last sturdy whoo-whoo from the indefatigible Mr. James, in a manner suitable to every one.

Lawson Shackles Nats With 7 Hits to Win for Tigers, 4-2, as Appleton Yields 8

WAR ADMIRAL CHOICE AS DERBY FLOOD HITS LOUISVILLE

Bases Filled In 5th, Nats Fail to Tally

By Shirley Povich.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, Mich., May 7.—The winning streak of Roxie Lawson, current ace of the Tigers' pitching staff, collided with the modest losing streak of the Nats today—and both survived. At the finish Lawson had his fourth straight pitching victory and the Nats had another licking—by one of their favorite scores, 4 to 2.

It wasn't a day for baseball. Biting blasts swept in off the lake and low-scudding clouds virtually strafed Navin Field this afternoon. And the fact is that the Nats didn't play much baseball. The Tigers hogged the show.

They lit right into Pete Appleton for a pair of runs in the first two innings and then, after the Nats tied the score at 2 to 2, in the third, they bounced right back at Appleton again for the winning runs. But don't let me mislead you. Pete wasn't as easy as that. Fact is, he pitched a tolerably good eight-hit game, but there was Lawson out there making assorted monkeys out of the Nats.

The amazing Lawson, who was something of a chump in this league last year, gave up seven hits to the Nats, but, after the third inning when a hit could be translated into a run, Lawson didn't give up any hits. In fact, the only blows the Nats made against him in the last six innings were a pair of useless singles in the fifth.

And so it came to pass that the two runs the Nats scored in the third were to be their only two runs of the afternoon although, of course, they didn't know it at the time. But they learned.

Only one Washington athlete was able to annoy Lawson to any great extent. He was Joe Kuhel, who whacked a three-base hit in the first inning, a two-bagger in the third and a single in the fifth, to do very nicely for himself.

Kuhel's opening-inning three-bagger with two out was wasted when Johnny Stone grounded tamely to the infield, and then the Tigers started cutting up. Mickey Cochrane, the manager, managed a single to center, took second on Greenberg's walk and took home with great haste on Gerard Walker's single into leftfield.

Mr. Lawson himself boosted his lead to 2 to 1 when he lashed a double into right field, to score Owen, who had forced Rogell, who had singled, but Lawson was something of a profligate when he went back to the pitching mound in the third.

He pitched a double to Walter Millies, and then, with two out, he pitched a double to Buddy Lewis, whose sock into right center scored Millies. Then Lawson, apparently in the vice of habit, pitched a double to Joe Kuhel, and Lewis was home with the tying run.

The inning was still full of possibilities for the Nats when Lawson filled the bases by walking Simmons and Stone, but Johnny Mihalic brought it to a happy climax for the Tigers by hitting into a force play.

The ball game was won and lost in the fifth. The Nats lost it when, with two out and the bases full, the hapless Mihalic again grounded into a force play. Singles by Kuhel and Stone and Simmons' walk had presented Mihalic with his chance.

The Tigers won the ball game in the same inning when the pestiferout Lawson, violating all the pitchers' union rules, made his second straight hit, a single to left. Appleton then pitched a single to Joe Joe White, which pushed Lawson to third, whence he scored while Bluege was converting Cochrane's grounder into a double-play.

That's really all that happened, except that Bill Rogell took the time in the seventh inning to bang a tremendous home run into the upper deck in right field and put the Tigers two runs ahead.

War Admiral Says Walter Haight

My selection for the sixty-third Kentucky Derby is not a sensational one. I prefer the chances of Glen Riddle Farm's WAR ADMIRAL. He has shown me ability to get away fast—those good breaks in Maryland. He has shown me that he can go the route both in workouts and racing. He has shown me courage—that day he shook off challenges and then drew far out at Havre De Grace.

He has shown me that he can run in the mud (regardless of what others may say)—in a workout over a treacherous course. His stable regards him as the best son of Man o' War since Crusader. Furthermore he looks and runs like his daddy. And then Charlie Kurtsinger will ride. I look for Fairy Hill to be second and Merry Maker third.

65,000 Jam Is Expected For Classic

V. Mars, have worked well, though, like many of the others due to march postward, they have been beaten in preparatory races.

Reaping Reward is the chief reliance of the pair and a colt with a finishing punch—one that nipped Pompoon at the wire at Narragansett last summer.

The New York turf writers who were sold on Pompoon through the winter and then smiled as he defeated a sprint field in his first outing soured on his chance with his defeat in the Wood Memorial.

However, as the Derby approaches many are swinging back to the son of Pompey, which worked out creditably this morning. They are putting the Wood effort down as an aftermath of a driving finish in his previous race and now expect his rest to have brought him around.

Texans Back Heelfly.

Rain would be "Pennies From Heaven" for backers of J. W. Parrish's Dellor. The Rolled Stockings colt, a winner here in a trial race, has done his best work in the mud. However, his handlers say he will start regardless of conditions.

Texas has a delegation here singing the prerace praises of Heelfly. A bad post actor, Heelfly won four stakes at Lone Star State tracks last year and the Three D's Stock Farm representative is assured a starting position.

Most of the entries won their chance at the chief American turf prize. Court Scandal, winner of the Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah, may add to the luck of Townsend B. Martin, who purchased the colt from John Hay Whitney on the eve of the Flamingo.

Earl Sande, who won three Kentucky Derbys in the saddle, comes back to try for his first victory as a trainer. Sande will saddle Maxwell Howard's Fencing and Sceneshifter. Both have given good accounts of themselves. With Sande of old in one of the saddles, the mount might be close to favoritism.

And the Others.

William duPont, jr., places his hopes in Fairy Hill, winner of the Santa Anita Derby last winter. The Foxcatcher Farm's colt was defeated at Havre de Grace but was believed to have "needed racing."

The Wheatley Stable is depending on Melodist, a Royal Minstrel colt, which gained prestige by winning the Wood Memorial. Melodist was not highly regarded by his own handlers until he surprised by his smashing victory over Pampoon and others.

65,000 Crowd Seen.

The Bradley forces will have Georgie Woolf on Billionnaire. Woolf won the first Santa Anita Handicap with Azucar and rides only ir money races now. Woolf was worried at the track today about his weight which is dangerously close to being above required 126 pounds.

Col. Matt Winn, the man in charge of the show here, predicts the greatest Derby in history tomorrow. Many join him in forecasting that the crowd will be of record proportions. He places the probable attendance at 65,000 and will be disappointed if the betting on the day's program does not top $1,500,000.

If there are no scratches before post time the race will be worth $52,575 to the winner. The record for the mile and one-quarter route of 2:01 4-5 was set by Twenty Grand in 1931.

May the best horse win.

Ambers Whips TonyCanzoneri

Veteran Stages Glorious but Futile Battle.

By the United Press.

New York, May 7.—Bull-shouldered Tony Canzoneri, one of the grandest fighting men the ring ever knew, was beaten tonight by Lightweight Champion Lou Ambers in 15-rounds at Madison Square Garden but the former titleholder was glorious in defeat.

Making a desperate attempt to win the lightweight title for the third time, 29-year-old Canzoneri, veteran of more than 12 years of brawling, gave youthful Ambers a much harder fight than expected. He was walloping away desperately at the bell. There was a loud and sentimental booing of the unanimous decision.

Ambers won by a wide margin. However, rounds won and lost do not tell the dramatic story of the fight—of the gallant stand by a great battler in the twilight of his career.

Canzoneri Shows Mettle.

Ambers was expected to cut Tony to ribbons. But the muffin-faced little warrior gave Larruping Lou plenty of opposition in every round. And he fought on and on, though the blood dripped from a gash on the bridge of his nose while his right eye puffed nearly closed and a big purple welt swelled his right cheek.

Ambers started after his challenger confidently in the early rounds and pressed the fighting throughout. However, his attack became more cautious as the fight wore on—after he had been staggered by lashing hooks to head and body, thrown by the curly-haired veteran who stood flat-footed in mid-ring most of the time, inviting attack. And there wasn't a round that Tony's lashing hooks did not set young Lou back on his heels.

"I Thought I Won."

Both men weighed the same, 135 pounds. But the champion had advantages of youth, speed and supposedly stamina. While Tony had punch and experience. This punch and experience was used by the old master with genuine artistry to prevent being slaughtered. His bobbing and weaving forced ambitious Lou to miss about one of every five blows thrown.

Yarosz's Late Spurt Whips Lou Brouillard

Boston, May 7 (AP).—Teddy Yarosz, of Pittsburgh, came out of a slump and put on a blazing last-round spurt tonight to gain a ten-round split decision over Lou Brouillard, of Worcester. Both are former middleweight champions. Brouillard weighed 161¾, 4 ounces more than the victor.

It was a bruising setto from start to finish, with the aggressive Brouillard pumping both hands to the stylish Pittsburgher's body in every round. Yarosz owed his slim victory to a terrific right hook to the head that drove his opponent through the ropes a minute or so before the final bell.

Eastern Rally Halts Western Titlists, 8 to 4

By John R. Vosburgh

Chief Charlie Guyon, the medicine man of interhigh sports, puffed on a cigar yesterday in Western Stadium and watched his Eastern High warriors carry out his predictions of a victory over Western by an 8-to-4 margin.

The wily chief has his own strategy, the relief pitching of pudgy Rip Carver and some Western errors to thank for Eastern's place atop the interhigh standings. It was the first defeat for the champions in the series and leaves the powerful Woodrow Wilson team as Eastern's chief rival for the title.

Carver, a stocky right-hander with a wicked drop, replaced erratic Lefty Walter Stockwell after the fifth inning and set the champs back with one hit and eight strikeouts. He also personally drove in the tying run with a rousing triple to left.

Only two of Eastern's runs were of the earned variety and four of them were directly due to Western errors.

Georgetown U. Upsets Pitt on Links, 6 to 3

Paced by Billy Dettweiler and Charley Pettijohn, whose 72 cards were two of the day's three best, Georgetown University's linksmen upset a favored Pittsburgh team yesterday, 6-3, in an Eastern Intercollegiate League match at Kenwood.

Penn State, dark horse of the circuit, shared the spotlight with the long-driving Hoya youngsters, nosing out Princeton, 6-3, to hand the Tigers their first league defeat in two years. In a third match, much closer than the final score indicates, Cornell disposed of Pennsylvania, 7-2.

Dettweiler, who was forced to withdraw from the Woodmont Club tournament earlier in the week after tying for the medal to be certain of competing in the current matches, swamped Frank Souchak, 5 and 4, in getting his mates off to a flying start. But even more impressive was Pettijohn's performance, for he routed Bill Daddio, 7 and 6.

Bill Clark, Penn State ace, turned in the third 72 score, winning over Siegler, of Princeton, by a 6-and-4 margin. Jerry Gross, in the third Tiger duo, was credited with the easiest decision of the matches, a 9 and 8 triumph over Jim Marks.

Two of Cornell's representatives were carried to the twentieth green before a decision was reached. Reimets nosed out Williams in this manner, and Peelor, of Penn scored a similar victory over Sulla. They were members of the same foursome.

Colonials Win, 4-3, Over West Virginia Team

Lanier Allows 6 Hits, Fans 13; Zaleska, Brennan Lead Slugging.

Bill Lanier wound up and let go with his finest mound performance of the season yesterday as George Washington triumphed over West Virginia, 10-4, in the first of a two-game series committed on the Ellipse. The second will be played this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at Griffith Stadium.

The lanky Colonial hurler had the Mountaineers waving futile bats at his offerings after a slow start, jetting up near the end when the visitors scored three of their markers. He fanned 13, a record for the season, and aided his cause with two lusty singles.

Batting hero of the day, however, was Zaleska, George Washington catcher, who collected two doubles and a single and drove in three runs, and angular Joe Brennan, the outfielder, who drove in two runs with a home run and scored three himself.

STRICTLY KENTUCKY DERBY: . . . from 1875 to 1896, inclusive, the Derby was run over a mile-and-a-half distance . . . since then the distance has been a mile and a quarter . . . the largest field to start in the Kentucky classic was 22 . . . in 1928 . . . but only three started in 1892, 1899 and 1905 . . . 28 favorites have won . . . and the shortest-priced winner was 1 to 3 . . . in 1881 (HINDOO), 1895 (HALMA) and 1905 (AGILE) . . . the longest-priced winner was DONERAIL, in 1913 . . . which paid off at $184.90 on each $2 ticket . . . OMAR KHAYYAM, in 1917, was the only imported horse to win the fixture.

COL. BRADLEY.

When COL. MATT WINN first had pari-mutuel machines installed at Churchill Downs to forestall attempts to close the track by shutting down on bookmakers, there were only two of the machines, those very dilapidated, in the country . . . so, he designed and had built six improved pari-mutuel machines . . . this form of wagering became an instant success . . . and last year, at the running of the sixty-second Derby, there were 194 sellers and 265 cashiers selling tickets on the big race . . . and even at that there were many thousands who were unable to buy tickets.

• • • •

In 1927, the late H. P. WHITNEY'S Whiskery won the Derby and Mr. Whitney was handed his reward of $51,000 in the form of a check . . . months later, the Churchill Downs authorities wrote him asking him if he would not please cash the check so they could straighten up their accounts . . . Whitney replied that he had not the slightest idea what had become of the check . . . which was found by a valet some time later in the handkerchief pocket of the coat he had been wearing on Derby Day . . . COL. E. R. BRADLEY'S horses have won the Derby four times.

• • • •

Two stallions, FALSETTO and VIRGIL, each sired three Derby winners . . . and there have been three father-and-son victories in the classic . . . only two jockeys have ever ridden three winners in the Derby . . . they were EARL SANDE, who has entered two horses this year, and ISAAC MURPHY, a Negro . . . A. J. ALEXANDER and JOHN E. MADDEN were the only two men ever to breed five Derby winners . . . BILL McCORMICK.

Randle's Pride Takes Show Honors in Jump-off With Ft. Myer Entry

Gray Knight Wins Hunter Title in Duel

By Bill McCormick.

The Washington Horse Show got under way at the Meadowbrook Club yesterday with major attention focused on the touch-and-out class, a thrilling affair in which the jumps were upped to four feet, nine inches before a winner could be declared.

The usual small opening-day crowd dotted the stands, but those familiar with the subject predict a goodly turnout today and a record crowd for Sunday, when the three-day show will close.

Randle's Pride, a rangy black gelding entered in the name of Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Randle, captured the touch-and-out class, but only after a prolonged struggle over imposing jumps in horse-to-horse competition with Sandy, a Fort Myer Horse Show entry.

Eleven horses successfully navigated the initial eight jumps at 4 feet as the remaining 18 in the field fell by the wayside. On a jump-off at 4 feet, 6 inches, Sandy, capably piloted by Maj. Arthur P. Thayer, captain of the Fort Myer team, and the Randle horse, ridden by Bobby Robey, were the only entries to complete the circuit without touching.

Tandem, Broomfield, Randle's Way, Firenze Gay Lady, Mac and Rolfe failed to clear the first jump on the first jump-off, as Margaret Cotter's Rocksie, Lieut. Frank Henry's Sir Conrad and Bar None, entered by Harry Legum, got part of the way around without touching. Sir Conrad, automatically fell heir to third place and Bar None captured fourth on the strength of the number of jumps successfully navigated on the first jump-off.

Then came the duel between Sandy and Randle's Pride at 4 feet 9 inches. The first time they tried, Sandy touched heavily on the first obstacle and the Randle horse barely nipped the same jump. Once again they lined up and once again Sandy failed to clear the first hurdle. Robey gathered Randle's Pride under him and fairly soared over the high bar, to capture first place and drop Sandy into the red ribbon class for this event.

Reds Take 3d in Row; Cards Bow to Giants

Selkirk and Averill Hit Homers; Castleman Holds St. Louis to 6 Hits as Giants Win, 8-2, and Bartell Clouts Homer.

By the United Press.

New York, May 7.—The Pittsburgh Pirates today increased their National League lead to two games by defeating the Philadelphia Phillies, 8-3.

Vaughan and Jensen, with four hits each, led the Pirates' 18-hit attack off LaMaster. Joe Bowman scattered 11 hits to win his second game of the year.

The second-place Cardinals were outclassed, 8-2, by the New York Giants. Clydell Castlemon doled out 6 hits. A 5-run burst in the sixth, featured by Bartell's homer with two on, clinched the game.

The six-game winning streak of the Chicago Cubs was stopped, 12-1, by the Dodgers. Frankhouse handcuffed the Cubs with 8 hits. The Dodgers had a field day, banging 15 hits off Shoun, Bryant and Kimball.

Bill Hallahan turned in his first win of the year, pitching the Cincinnati Reds to a 5-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox. He kept 9 hits well scattered.

The Boston Red Sox took command of the American League, soaring above the Tigers and Yankees by defeating the Chicago White Sox, 5-4. Lefty Grove kept 8 hits scattered to score his first win of the year. Vernon Kennedy gave only 5 safeties, but was erratic. It was the fourth straight win for Boston.

The Cleveland Indians edged out the New York Yankees, 7-6, when a belated Yank rally fell short. A home run with two on by Selkirk in the eighth led a 4-run New York burst. Denny Galehouse was the winning pitcher, and Bump Hadley was the loser.

The Philadelphia Athletics were set back, 9-6, by the St. Louis Browns. Jim Walkup was effective in the pinches, but allowed 10 hits. The Browns combed four Athletic hurlers for 12 hits, aided by 4 errors.

Grains Recede After May Corn Sets New Peak

Moisture in Wheat Areas and Heavy Receipts Lower Wheat Prices.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 7.—Despite 1¼ cents a bushel transient upturn of May corn to a new 12-year high price record, $1.35½, all gains closed today with losses. Reports of more or less moisture were needed in domestic wheat areas Southwest as well as in Canada had a bearish effect, and so likewise did prospective large deliveries on Chicago May wheat contracts. A total of 350,000 bushels of wheat was sold into store here today, presumably for delivery purposes.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1-cent@2⅛ cents under yesterday's finish, May 1.26⅞@1.27, July 1.17⅛@1.17¼, September 1.16@1.16⅛; corn 1¼ off to ½ up, May 1.33⅝, July 1.19¾@1.19⅞, September 1.09@1.09¼; oats varying from 1 cent decline to ⅛ advance, May 47½@47⅝, and rye ½@1¾ down, May 1.12¾. The provisions outcome was unchanged to 17 cents lower.

So. Pac. 1936 Revenue Peak For Six Years

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 7.—Southern Pacific Lines, second biggest railway system of the country, today reported 1936 operating revenues of $204,338,550, the largest since 1930 and a gain of 25 per cent over 1935.

The annual pamphlet report said conditions affecting traffic volume were generally favorable throughout the year and the increase in operating revenues resulted principally from a rise of 31 per cent in net ton miles of revenue freight.

Also a factor was a gain of 21.8 per cent in revenue passenger miles of the steam rail lines.

Heavier traffic, the report said, was augmented during the last three months of the year owing to interruption of steamship service at Pacific ports.

Operating expenses increased 19.5 per cent. Taxes rose less than 1 per cent. Equipment and joint facility rents increased 32.3 per cent. Net railway operating income totaled $34,086,680, an increase of 71.8 per cent. The upturn in freight revenues was 25.9 per cent.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Improve in Slow Trading, With Rail Shares in Demand; Bonds Are Firm.

New York, May 7.—Improvement took place in bonds and stocks, but dealings again were rather small. Stock prices opened higher and held firm throughout. Bonds were well taken from the Government list downward and the money market showed a slightly easier tendency in one or two spots. Commodities were mostly higher, although grains were an exception. July wheat dropped 1½ cents to 117¼ cents a bushel.

Securities markets now seem to be in that stage when discriminating investment buying is the most important influence. It is natural that, after a sharp decline from high levels reached under a good deal of speculative propulsion, the investor should find an attraction where the speculator sees only uncertainty and danger; just as the opposite attitudes are taken by the two classes of buyers on the top of a rise. Stocks are now being picked for their chances of appreciation under the spur of earnings and for their dividend possibilities, rather than because of tips, inflationary scares and the general hurrah of a bull market.

The market for good grade bonds also has improved markedly in the last few days, now that the gold fright has vanished for a time, that the idea that some good may be found in a policy of Government economy after is gaining ground, and that the money market is looking steady after the preparations for the higher reserve requirements. The recent successful offering of a large utility bond issue by a leading house has done much to reassure investors, and beyond question a great deal of money is about. Estates, trust funds, insurance companies and the like must do something with their money, and much of it can't go anywhere except into bonds.

Federal Bank Support.

On the financial side the week is closing with more reassurance. A week has passed without need of further Federal Reserve Bank support of the Government bond market, and the change to the new high level of bank reserve requirements has been accomplished with an easy money market. Excess bank reserves still are at the high level of nearly $900,000,000, with more than $100,000,000 for use here.

Some expansion this week has nevertheless taken place and more is foreshadowed. For one thing the gold imports rose sharply, even compared with recent heavy shipments. The addition of $56,000,000 to the monetary gold stock this week put another large borrowing operation up to the Treasury, and the gain of $45,000,000 in currency circulation probably reflected month-end arrangements, although it lifted the total more than $500,000,000 above the corresponding period of a year ago, when nevertheless prices were lower, business less active and pay rolls were smaller.

Acceptances.

The reduction in bankers bill rates, forecast in this column Wednesday, came along on schedule but it brought no appreciable increase in bill sales by banks to dealers. The banks continue to discount all their own bills and to hold tightly to the bills of other banks. Acceptance rates had become out of line with Treasury bill rates. Despite the fact that the reduced yields on acceptances was little more than a gesture, it was the first downward movement in the money market for several months. It remains to be seen how permanent the new rates will be.

New Farm Scheme.

The country air is proverbially stimulating to the appetite, and that seems to apply to money income. Corn prices in yesterday's markets rose to the highest in 12 years, which is not only high on a comparative basis, but is absolutely high. Cash corn at Chicago is now virtually $1.40 a bushel, and no one ever has seriously maintained that the cost of producing a bushel is more than from a fifth to a seventh of that price. Naturally the high price is bringing out a large planting this spring, and if maintained next year's crop will be even heavier, as it should be if consumers are to be able to afford the cereal. The same thing is true of wheat.

Aiding Speculation.

Under similar circumstances with other commodity prices the Government recently withdrew its orders, to stop the rise. On the contrary with farm products, plans now are under way to hold down production (at the taxpayers' expense), in order to promote a further price rise. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is reported to be taking up seriously a new scheme of corn loans whereby farmers will be heavily paid to remove thousands of acres of corn lands from production. Cash wheat is selling in the principal market at $1.50 a bushel. If wheat and corn are to be maintained at anything near those levels, another broad speculative advance in farm prices is as certain as anything can be, and then we will have the whole mess to do over again.

Santa Fe.

Santa Fe continued to be a leader in stocks, and it was easily the star of the railroad division. Much of the recent demand for the shares has come from investment sources, part of it attributed to a resumption of British buying in the best grade American common stocks. The strength of the stock and the recent sharp improvement in earnings suggest a large dividend. The road has plenty of cash, as brokers point, and some analysts also suggest that maintenance charges will be lower this year. The Santa Fe has only one piece of trackage on its transcontinental lines that may be said to be below the high standard generally maintained over the road, and heavy expenditures for track straightening and grade reduction now are out of the way.

Brokers' Loans.

The rise of $45,000,000 in brokers' loans for the week ended Wednesday brought a number of explanations of unusual character, for the action of the stock market strongly suggested a reduction in loans. One theory advanced was that withdrawal of foreign balances had to be replaced here by broker borrowing. Another was that payment last week on a railroad bond issue was largely responsible. Quite evidently the rise was not the result of an increase in margin speculation.

Stock Movements.

Railroad stocks provided the theme for the trading. Leaders were Santa Fe, New York Central and Northern Pacific. Santa Fe advanced the farthest and reached a new high price. Central enjoyed the largest trading volume. Most of the railway equipment stocks hardened, but the steel issues were mixed. Steel's range most of the day was less than a point. Bethlehem did better on stories of armament contracts. Fractional losses were the rule among the utilities. Amusements were firm and mail orders worked higher on the large gains in sales reported for last month. Farm implements climbed rapidly as, having everything in their favor, they probably should. On the uncertain list was B. M. T. common and preferred, dropping 2 to 4 points, and Crucible Steel preferred, which dipped 7 points on one sale. Detroit & Mackinac common and preferred enjoyed their largest volume in a long time on gains of 2 to 4 points. Higher prices were quoted for Houdaille Hershey B, Remington Rand, National Supply, Poor and Servel.

Acceptance Rate Cut After Five Increases

New York, May 7 (AP).—A cut in rates today on bankers' acceptances, a credit instrument used chiefly to finance foreign trade, upset expectations widely held in financial circles a few weeks ago of further advance in short-term borrowing costs. After five increases accompanying Federal Reserve Board moves to curtail potential credit expansion by locking up the bulk of member banks' surplus reserves, bill dealers reversed the trend and lowered rates on most maturities 1-16 of 1 per cent.

Business Pace Holds Against Stock Decline

New High Indicated for This Month in 28 Major Industries.

New York, May 7.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co. says today:

"Despite the uncertainties created by the recent sharp declines in security and speculative raw material prices, there are no signs of any slackening in business activity over the near term. Indeed, preliminary estimates of production in 28 major industries indicate that industrial activity in May will reach a new high for the recovery period. The Standard Statistics Co. index of production (corrected for seasonal variation, 1926 equals 100) is tentatively placed at 106.0 for the month. This figure compares with 104.7 for April, 85.4 for May of 1936, and 112.2 for May, 1929.

"If the May estimate is substantially correct, industrial production for the first five months of 1937, as measured by the index, will average 103.7, as compared with 81.6 for the corresponding 1936 period, a gain of about 27 per cent. The year-to-year gain for the first half should be close to 25 per cent.

"Operations in most major industries should hold at close to present high levels through the rest of the second quarter, at least. Despite heavy automobile production in recent weeks, retail demand has been so great that no important reduction in the industry's backlog of orders has been witnessed, indicating a high rate of output until well into the summer. The steel and textile industries are likewise expected to operate at close to present levels for another month or more. Building construction will be seasonally active through the spring.

"Retail trade prospects continue excellent. While the early Easter this year distorted comparisons during March and April, it is estimated that department-store sales for the two months combined recorded a gain of between 12 per cent and 14 per cent. In view of the large number of strikes during the period and the unseasonable weather in some sections of the country, retail trade has been entirely satisfactory."

Jordan Granted 30-Day Stay By Roosevelt

"I was in the penitentiary at Moundsville, W. Va., serving time for forgery," he said. "There were three men waiting to be hanged there and I was sort of a trusty. I used to see the chaplain, Father Coughlin, come in and comfort the men, and I got to talking to him. He once asked me if I Belonged to a church, and I said I didn't. He said I ought to belong to one, any one. . . ."

Influenced by Chaplain.

"I thought then about trying to join, but I didn't want anybody to say that I had to go to jail to get religion.

"After I came to the jail, I learned that Father Nuttall (the Rev. R. P. Nuttall, of the Dominican order) was the chaplain here. I sent for him and told him how I felt. He gave me a catechism and a rosary and I have been taking instructions ever since."

Jordan has yet to be baptized and confirmed.

Father Nuttall says mass in the jail rotunda every other Sunday, and Jordan is allowed to leave his cell in "death row" and follow the services through the bars of the tier.

He was asked how he felt about the girl in Mount Vernon, the one he expected to marry, and who was persuaded by the prosecution to come here in March, 1936, and testify against him.

Defends Former Fiancee.

"Well," he said, "I don't suppose I blame her. You would have to understand her family, how she was trying to protect her name and her 10-year-old daughter, to know what I mean. Love her? No, I guess that was all a mistake."

Pierre, Paul, Storm Orphans, Become Pets of Neighborhood

Lydia Brunnabend Doesn't Mind Attention She Attracts When She Takes Squirrels for Daily Walk.

Pierre and Paul, two orphans of the storm, have brought a great deal of merriment to the neighbors of Miss Lydia Brunnabend, and great deal of joy to her.

Two rescued squirrels in themselves are not news, but the fact that Miss Brunnabend takes them out walking in the heart of the college district near her home, each fastened to a leash, is.

"People stop and stare and laugh," she smiled happily yesterday. "When a bus goes by everybody points. Once a bus stopped so all the passengers could see. Little children go wild with joy. Everybody asks me questions."

She had quite a time rearing her infant pets. They were blind and only a day old when she found them in their fallen nest, March 16. She took them home, kept them on a hot-water bottle, fed them with an eyedropper and later fed them with a nipple she managed to find downtown which was just the right size for a baby squirrel's mouth.

"They never bite me, and love to play," she beamed. "When I lie down, they'll sneak up and pull my hair, then scamper out of reach. They're housebroken and eat practically nothing—an apple, or some peanuts, and a saucer of milk. They're wonderful pets, and I simply love them, don't I, Paul and Pierre?"

Paul and Pierre sat up when questioned and scratched their collars, which Miss Brunnabend crocheted, emitting two noises which might have meant most anything.
